Quentin Reynolds, ace reporter, has, among other gifts, the uncanny ability to be on the spot when world-shaking news breaks. He was in London during the critical days of the Blitz. His books, articles, broadcasts, films and lectures did more to arouse popular support in America for Britain's cause than all the official communiques and propaganda combined. —EDITOR.

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS

THIS book is as personal as a toothache, a liking for spinach or a taste in fancy ties. It is the story of the things I saw and the people I met in a year's roving from one theatre of war to another. In no sense is it intended to be an analytic discussion of major military or political campaigns, nor is it intended to be a summing up of the war effort made by Britain or Russia during that time.

REYNOLDS

The American - Japanese conflict is 10,000 miles from where I'm writing this, and all I know about that is the little I've read in the papers.

A foreign correspondent travels more, travels faster, learns less and sees less than any known form of animal or plant life. This book will be an affirmation of that proposition. Occasionally, one of us is privileged to be on the scene when events of interest are taking place. Usually this is sheer luck.

Occasionally, through no desire of our own, we find ourselves in dangerous spots. When that happens we write stories glorifying our intrepid behavior during the danger by using the well-known method of mock modesty first assumed successfully by Richard Harding Davis, the father of our craft.

Many important things have happened during the past year. The first great event, heralding whole-hearted par-

British Evacuate Big Coastal Area

LONDON, Sept. 19.—(CP)—The War Office announced today that all inhabitants of a "considerable area" in the east riding of Yorkshire, facing the North Sea, would be evacuated and the district taken over entirely for military purposes. No further explanation was given.

At the same time, the Belgian news agency in London reported that German authorities, apparently fearing another Dieppe-type raid, had ordered many families out of Ostend on the Belgian coast. Only three hours notice was given in some cases, the news agency said.

This was the second such requisition in England in recent months. The other was for an area of East Anglia facing the southern arm of the North Sea, across from the Netherlands and Belgium.

SUB CAPTAIN KILLED, CREW CAPTURED

Canuck Destroyer Rams, Sinks Enemy U-Boat

OTTAWA, Sept. 19—(CP)—In a blazing close-range gun battle the Canadian destroyer Assiniboine sank a German submarine, killed its commander and captured the crew, Naval Minister Macdonald announced today.

The battle—described by Rear-Admiral L. W. Murray, flag officer Newfoundland force, as "one of the most spirited actions of the war"—took place at an unannounced time and an unannounced location.

Mr. Macdonald said it was "only one of the successful actions waged by the Royal Canadian Navy against U-boats." Details of other actions will not be given until it is certain they will not help the enemy.

IN NEWS BEFORE

Twice in the news before in this war, the Assiniboine is a destroyer flotilla leader acquired by the Canadian Navy shortly before its outbreak. In March, 1940, she shared honors with a British cruiser in the capture of the German merchant ship Hannover in the Caribbean Sea and she carried Prime Minister Churchill to Iceland on his visit there on his return from the Atlantic conference with President Roosevelt in the summer of 1941.

The submarine was sunk by ramming, after a spirited surface action in which gunfire and depth charges played their part.

One Canadian seaman, Ordinary Seaman Kenneth Watson, of Revelstoke, B.C., was killed.

In making the announcement of the Assiniboine success, the naval minister gave full details with the exception of the date and scene of action.

The submarine, he said, was caught on the surface by H.M.C.S. Assiniboine in dense fog. Instead of endeavoring to dive, she sought to escape into the fog, and for a while was out of sight. The destroyer's captain, however, was able to resume contact which was not lost again until the U-boat was sent to the bottom.

BOTH SCORE HITS

Gunfire was exchanged, both vessels scoring hits. A small fire was caused in the destroyer, interfering with the gun control and leaving the gun crews to independent firing.

At times the action was waged at such close quarters that the faces of the combatants could plainly be seen by their opponents.

Toward the close of the engagement a depth charge fired from the destroyer actually landed on the submarine's deck, from which it rolled into the sea there to explode beneath the enemy's hull.

Interpreting War News

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Russian last ditch stand at Stalingrad, described by the Nazis as "embittered" and "suicidal," has thrown Hitler off schedule at least another day.

The fact must be that the Nazi attempt to storm the city streets from the Northwest was more "suicidal" than the Russian defence.

German casualties inevitably were heavier than those of Russian defenders who first contained the twin thrusts in a house-to-house battle, then drove the attackers out. In close quarter action of that type, the attacker invariably pays a heavier casualty price several times over than the defender.

Stalingrad is so certainly proven

VICHY RADIO REPORTS:

New Landing on Madagascar

LONDON, Sept. 19—(CP)—The Vichy radio broadcast a Madagascar announcement today that British forces have occupied Brickaville, on the east coast of Madagascar, 100 miles due east of Tananarive, the capital. This announcement indicated another landing has been made on the island.

Brickaville is 70 miles southwest of Tamatave, Madagascar's chief commercial port, where British forces made their first landings on the east coast yesterday following their original west coast landings 10 days ago.

Both a highway and railroad connect Brickaville and Tananarive and it presumably was to gain access to these strategic communications that the British command put the new force ashore today. The Vichy French described it as composed of light units.

There was no immediate report from Vichy on the progress of British forces pushing toward Tananarive from four landings on the west coast.

NEARING CAPITAL

A British commentator in London said, however, that the methodical occupation of Madagascar is proceeding and that one British column advancing from Majunga, on the west coast, is less than 60 miles from Tananarive.

This informant said there is a possibility that Vichy French forces might be concentrating at the capital for a stand but that at present resistance is negligible and only a few British casualties have been suffered.

A mysterious station identifying itself as "France Libre D'Outre Mer"—Free France of the Farther Sea—was heard at Port Louis, Maurits, vigorously assailing the Vichy government's policy in Madagascar.

Accounts of this broadcast relayed from the nearby British island of Mauritius said the mystery station urged Madagascar citizens to demand that Armand Annet, governor-general of the island, disclose British armistice terms which he rejected.

Extension of N.A.R. Line Now Studied

Inquiries are now being made to determine the feasibility of extending the Northern Alberta railway to connect with Alaska, Hon. W. A. Fallow, provincial minister of public works, declared Friday night when addressing a provincial by-election campaign meeting in the Slovak hall at Beverly.

Mr. Fallow was speaking in support of the candidature of John B. Gillies, Social Credit candidate.

The minister said the inquiries were being made in connection with the construction of the proposed Alaska railway by the United States government.

He declared that he doubted whether the route at present proposed could be constructed in time to serve its purpose, and said that in view of this inquiries were being made on an alternative route which would require the extension of the N.A.R.

Jap Official is Called Home From Russia

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The German radio broadcast today a Tokyo dispatch saying that the first secretary of the Japanese embassy at Kuibyshev, Russia, had been recalled for consultation. The dispatch, by Transocean, said that the diplomat, Funao Miyakawa, probably would leave the Russian provisional capital Sept. 25.

Miyakawa was a specialist assigned by Tokyo to represent Japanese interests in a long series of negotiations relating to incidents along the Manchurian-Japanese border.

The Russians protested to him when a Soviet gunboat was sunk in a clash with Japanese forces on the Amur river in June, 1937. Then he presented Japan's counter-protest in Moscow.

Miyakawa delivered another formal protest in March, 1938, on the activities of Russian troops in Siberia and in September, 1938, conducted negotiations with the Russian foreign office after a Russian-Japanese clash at Sulfonho, 250 miles north of Changkufeng on the Siberian-Korean-Manchurian border where fighting occurred at about the same time.

Cuba Sentences "Important" Spy

HAVANA, Sept. 19.—(AP)—A special tribunal today sentenced Heinz August Luning to death by firing squad as a German spy. The 31-year-old Luning was seized early this month by Cuban police who described him as "one of the most important spies yet captured in America."

Allied Planes Blast at Four Key Jap Bases

By The Canadian Press

Allied headquarters in Australia reported today that Allied planes, striking for the second consecutive day, pounded four key Japanese bases in the islands above Australia and set fires visible 50 miles at one of them.

At the same time, a spokesman at headquarters disclosed that Australian troops still were resisting on Japanese-occupied Timor island in the East Indies.

The spokesman said a small force of Australians were holding out against bitter Japanese efforts to destroy them, and that at one time the Australians broke up a Japanese attack and forced the invaders to withdraw.

Japanese forces [illegible] island, which is half Netherlands and half Portuguese, were [illegible] dies fell last March.

FIGHTING SLACKENS

On the New Guinea front, dispatches broadcast by the Australian radio reported that fighting in the jungle-clad Owen Stanley mountains had slackened after a minor shift to the south.

"This indicates that the Japanese may have made a slight advance," the broadcast said, "but as fighting is scattered between loosely connected groups of men undue importance should not be attached to this movement."

"Japanese troops which swarmed over the 8,000-foot range last week previously were reported only 32 airline miles from Port Moresby, vital Allied outpost.

Slashing at Japanese supply lines feeding the drive against Port Moresby, Allied heavy bombers and fighters attacked enemy bases at Salamaua, Lae and Buna, in New Guinea, and Rabaul, New Britain, where the huge fires were started.

229 Ballots Are Reported at Poll

Another 84 votes were cast in the advance poll Friday, bringing the two-day total to 229, it was reported Friday by H. H. Crawford, returning officer. On Thursday 145 ballots were recorded.

The advance poll will be open Saturday from 2 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m. for the convenience of those who will be out of the city on Tuesday, Sept. 22, provincial by-election day.

Engineer Killed, 4 Hurt as Train Boiler Explodes

SOMERSET, Pa., Sept. 19.—(AP)—The boiler on one of the locomotives of a double-header Baltimore and Ohio freight train exploded today at the Somerset County village of Listie, killing the locomotive's engineer and injuring four other train crewmen.

Death - stand Russian troops were credited officially today with defeating the Germans in a critical five-hour battle for a hill commanding the heart of Stalingrad, and as the struggle raged into its 26th day the Soviet high command announced:

"All German attempts to capture this valuable position have failed."

At least two other assaults by massed Nazi tanks and troops were declared to have been repulsed in the smoke-shrouded city itself and in the northwest outskirts, amid perhaps the bloodiest fighting of the entire German-Russian war.

German field headquarters reported tersely the battle was being "successfully continued in the face of stubborn enemy resistance" and said a strong diversionary attack by tank-led Soviet invantry north of Stalingrad "collapsed with severe losses to the enemy."

HINT RED FLANK DRIVE

This was the first intimation Soviet Marshal Timoshenko may have launched a powerful flanking movement to sweep around the Nazi siege armies.

Significantly, Hitler's headquarters claimed no specific gains in Stalingrad, and Russian dispatches said the Red armies had yielded no further ground in the city.

Fresh Soviet reserves, trained in Siberia, were reported pouring into the battle in high spirits, bolstering the weary veterans now within 24 hours of matching the historic defence record of Sevastopol, where the Russians held out for 27 days against the Germans' climactic Crimean offensive.

In the central Caucasus, the situation once more reached a critical stage as the Germans stepped up the fury of their drive through the Terek river valley toward the Grozny oil fields and the Caspian Sea.

SERIES OF ATTACKS

Soviet headquarters said the Germans, supported by 100 tanks, launched a series of attacks east of Mozdok, and although 900 Nazis were reported killed, there was no claim the thrust had been stopped.

The German high command said Nazi troops broke through strongly-fortified and mined positions in the Mozdok sector and drove the Russians from several dominating heights.

Soviet planes of the Baltic fleet raided an unidentified port in or near German-occupied Denmark, the Russians announced, and left five big fires raging.

Dispatches from Stockholm said planes flew over the west coast of Sweden during the night shortly after heavy explosions had been heard in the direction of Denmark.

1,300,000 Nazis Killed on Southern Russ Front Alone

MOSCOW, Sept. 19.—(AP)—A Communist party announcement today stated that German casualties in the drive on south Russia alone have reached 1,300,000 killed.

The announcement was made by the deputy propaganda chief of the Communist party, Sebastevv.

REFUTES "HINTS"

Social Credit Is First To Define War Policies Avers Premier Aberhart

The Social Credit Party was the first political group in Canada to issue a declaration of its war policy, Premier William Aberhart declared Saturday in a statement made in reply to any citizen of Edmonton who "should suggest, even by implication, that the present Alberta government has not done everything possible to help in our great national war effort."

In this statement the premier said that on Sept. 5, 1939, four days before Canada entered the war, the provincial government and Social Credit members of parliament issued a joint statement on their stand in the war. To the effect, in part, that "a great wastage of life and property can be prevented by throwing the full weight of our resources behind Britain and her allies at the very beginning of the conflict."

Following is Premier Aberhart's statement in full:

"It is a matter of very deep regret to me that any citizen of Edmonton should suggest, even by implication, that the present Alberta government has not done everything possible to help in our great national war effort. I resent this insinuation very much and I should like to correct any false impressions which may have been given by it.

"On September 5, 1939, four days before Canada entered the war, the provincial government and Social Credit members of parliament issued a joint statement following a decision to consider the crisis with which the British Empire was faced.

FIRST DECLARATION

"Not only was this the first declaration of war policy by any political group in Canada, but I should like you to note that it has not been done since by the Social Credit movement to deviate in any respect whatever from that original stand.

"I quote from that statement as published in the press:

"'We were firmly convinced that the task which confronts our country is so great that it will require the most self-sacrificing effort of every Canadian citizen in order to bring the peace to a successful and speedy conclusion. We were convinced that a great wastage of life and property can be prevented by throwing the full weight of our resources behind Britain and her allies at the very beginning of the conflict.'

"Then the statement continues:

"'Very careful consideration was given to the way in which Canada could give this support most effectively. The one outstanding feature which we feel to be most essential is the just demand of our citizens for the greatest possible equalization of sacrifice which the struggle will necessitate. It is evident that the saving of life and liberty is supreme in this connection but even to expect this sacrifice without fully requiring the mobilization of material resources held by our citizens, does not attempt to approach any equalization of sacrifice and could be considered grossly unjust.'

"I am still quoting:

"'Another fact that gave us a basis for very definite conclusions is the enormous debt that always accumulates during war conditions. The hardships and depressions of the last post-war period and the evils arising therefrom to cause this present war were due largely if not wholly, to overwhelming debt burdens that led to financial chaos and economic havoc.'

"One more sentence or two completes the statement:

NEW METHOD

"'This has been burned most painfully into our consciousness during the past quarter of a century. We therefore consider that a more modern and scientific method of financing our unavoidable responsibilities in a country so potentially rich as Canada, should be adopted to obviate to a large extent this most serious after-effect which is almost as devastating in terms of human life and suffering as that produced by war itself.'

"That is the end of the quotation.

"This was followed by a statement of the very definite proposals suggested to enable the resources of the country to be mobilized for a total war effort, and to provide for the needs of the fighting forces and their dependents with a measure of security which would have ensured the most effective mobilization of the nation's manpower.

"At that time the stand of the Social Credit party was criticized bitterly. But I submit that the events of the past three years have not only vindicated their stand, but it has revealed that they did not lack courage and foresight in the lead which they gave to the country.

"Immediately Canada entered the war the provincial government undertook to give its wholehearted co-operation in furthering the national effort. This it has done faithfully.

CONTRIBUTIONS

"Among the many contributions it has made to this end I would like to mention the following:

"1—Some of the province's best men took road and other jobs at less than half the salaries they had been receiving in order that the department of national defence to speed construction of strategic projects.

"2—Provincial buildings like the Edmonton Normal School, the Calgary Technical School, Camrose Normal School, Vermilion Agricultural School and the University residences were willingly handed over to the department of national defence to assist in the great Commonwealth Air Training Scheme.

"3—The province gave a lead to price control by setting up a Price Spreads Board before any federal action was taken, and this board has co-operated closely with the Federal body ever since.

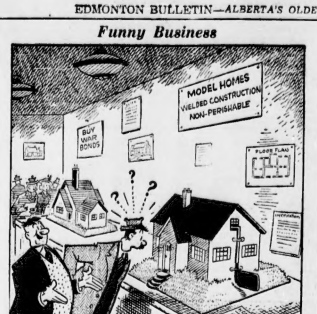

"4—The province established the Veterans' Volunteer Reserve—better known as the V.V.R.—under the attorney-general. School cadet training was revived, special technical courses were included in school curricula to provide a pool of trained recruits; a special radio school was established at the University, while enhanced training courses were provided through the Youth Training Program.

MONETARY REFORM

"5—In addition to these, the provincial government has consistently pressed for a proper reform of our monetary system to ensure a more efficient total war effort and preparation for post-war reconstruction—not in a spirit of carping criticism but as a definite constructive contribution to the problems with which we are grappling. Yet, even though it could not agree with the war finance policies being used, the Alberta government gave its full support to the federal authorities in their war loan and savings certificates campaigns, continuously very freely indeed. Likewise it has extended the fullest co-operation to the military and federal authorities in every way required.

"In short the record of the provincial government in furthering the war effort is one of which we all should be proud—and I submit that it is deserving of your support.

"Surely this is one matter upon which we can all be united and work together enthusiastically. That is all I have to say on this question."

Four-Ton Bombs Used by R.A.F. To Blast Nazis

LONDON, Sept. 19—(CP)—New 8,000-pound bombs were used by the R.A.F. in raids which laid waste vast areas of Karlsruhe Sept. 2 and Duesseldorf eight nights later, the air ministry announced yesterday in the first official disclosure that such massive explosives were being loosed upon Germany.

Four-thousand pounders, which have been in use for some months, now are commonplace in the almost nightly assaults on Hitler's industrial establishments.

More than a square mile of Duesseldorf was wrecked in the raid and in Karlsruhe 270 acres were laid waste, the ministry reported after a study of photographs made by reconnaissance planes.

More than 100,000 fire bombs were showered on Duesseldorf, spreading great fires in the wreckage churned up by the "great weight" of 8,000 and 4,000 pound high explosive bombs, the air ministry news service said.

3 Draft Dodgers Escape From Jail Following Arrest

MONT JOLI, Que., Sept. 19.—(CP) — According to reports circulating here last night, three men escaped from jail Thursday a few hours after they were arrested in a nearby wood allegedly on charges of refusing to report for military training.

Provincial police declined to comment on the reports which were that the men were arrested in a hunter's camp in the woods where they had taken refuge from the police, looking for them for several weeks. The men are said not to have resisted arrest.

Police are reported to have found large supplies of merchandise, cigarettes, fruits and preserved vegetables, liquids, snowshoes, boots, blankets and other articles which allegedly were stolen from stores in the district.

Interpreting War News

now both a symbol and a strategic pivot which Hitler must have at any price that it is a fair guess he is lashing his generals and troops to outmatch the Russians in suicidal determination. Yet that first repulse tended to confirm the impression that when the battle reached the street-fighting stage, the odds against the Russians lessened rather than increased.

The enemy could not bring to bear in such close action and so far restricted a field his dive bombers can take superiority. Man to man, the Russians stood him off. Only by throwing overwhelmingly superior manpower at terrible cost into the fight can the city be reduced.

London has forwarded a report from Moscow that at the supreme moment, orders to counter-attack not to stand and die where they fought, were issued to all Russian units in Stalingrad. They stressed that every house or hill regained meant time lost to Hitler. There were also Moscow reports of reinforcements being poured into Siberia pouring into the battle along the Don and Volga.

NORTH DRIVE LATE

It is too late for Russian counter pressure far to the north to influence greatly the trend of the Stalingrad battle. It has long been too late for an Anglo-American second-front assault from the west to ease pressure on Russia at that point.

Nor do Canadian losses in the Dieppe operations, amounting to substantially hundreds of the total force of 5,000 Canadians engaged, suggest that mass Allied landing operations across the English channel are soon to be expected.

Whatever else was learned by the Allied high command at Dieppe, the lesson that a real counter-invasion attempt to carry the war to Germany from the west must await far greater expansion of Anglo-American air and sea power as well as manpower than has yet been attained seems dominant.

Australia Plans Use 'White Collar' Men For Farming

10,000 Shipmen on Strike in States

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 19—(AP)—More than 10,000 shipyard workers were idle here last night in a dispute with city officials over a five-cent ferry charge and the companies of state troops guarded the city hall, the court house and approaches to the shipyard.

Work virtually ceased at the Pinto Island yard of the Alabama Dry Dock and Shipbuilding company, across the Mobile river from the city, as officials of the International Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers (C.I.O.) and the Mobile city commission conferred.

The work stoppage began violently Thursday when the city-operated ferry service was substituted for a free ferry formerly provided by the company. Numerous disorders were reported, and twenty-eight men, including the president of the C.I.O. union, were arrested.

Red Navy Planes Raid 'Enemy Port'

MOSCOW, Sept. 19—(AP)—Airmen of the Russian Baltic fleet raided an "enemy port" last night, overcoming powerful anti-aircraft fire to bomb selected targets, the Soviet information bureau reported today.

"Some big explosions and five big fires broke out in the port," a communique said.

The announcement may explain reports from Stockholm that foreign planes flew over the west coast of Sweden during the night shortly after heavy explosions had been heard in the direction of Denmark.

R.A.F. Lacks Flexibility For Land Battles

LONDON, Sept. 19.—(CP)—The Evening Standard, in a critical estimate of the results of the Dieppe raid, said today that the R.A.F. still lacks the flexibility necessary "to co-operate with land forces in a major modern battle against strongly-defended position."

The Standard's military correspondent charged that "compartmentalized thinking" of the forces engaged in the raid was carried to the "extreme point of having three commanders for the Dieppe operation."

It declared that if the British people "could feel that the results of the land fighting being quietly and fully assimilated by those concerned, irrespective of personal pique or service pride, there would be little need to reopen the subject. But there has been ample—and public—evidence that this is not so."

Referring to the absence of Allied bombers from the immediate scene of operations, he continued: "There is something materially wrong with our air tactics if we cannot exploit air superiority such as we enjoyed over Dieppe to hamstring the defence during the vital moments of the attack."

Bread, Butter Treat For Sub Prisoners

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Sept. 19.—(CP)—White bread and butter was a great treat for German prisoners captured by the Canadian destroyer Assiniboine in the sinking of a submarine, members of the Assiniboine crew revealed when they reached port.

They said the Germans were fed up and glad the war was over for them but were still stout Nazis. For a few minutes the U-boat crew thought they were going to be shot as they had been told Canadians did not take prisoners.

When a guard summoned five of them to come on deck the others shook hands with them and said goodbye. But the Canadians were just taking them up five at a time for exercise.

Limitless quantities of water for drinking and washing amazed the Germans as much as the white bread and butter.

"They had been at sea for more than 30 days and they certainly looked like it," said one of the guards.

One prisoner, named Bill Frederich, said he lived on a farm not in Manitoba before the war but spoke little English and did not elaborate.

R.A.F. Planes Scatter Mines In Enemy Seas

LUNDUN, Sept. 19—(CP)—A large force of bombers scattered mines in enemy waters last night, coastal command and naval aircraft attacked shipping off the Netherlands coast and fighter pilots raided railway targets in occupied France, the air ministry announced today.

Five bombers were lost in the night operations, the communique said.

The air ministry made no mention of any bomber attacks on German Baltic ports by British bombers as reported by today's German high command communique.

LONE NAZI ATTACKER

A single German air raider bombed and machine-gunned an area on the southeast coast of Britain in daylight after sweeping low across the English channel and dodging through heavy anti-aircraft defences.

First reports indicated there were no casualties, however.

There was no aerial activity over Britain during the night and the R.A.F. presumably was grounded by bad weather over the continent.

Jews to Celebrate Day of Atonement

The most secred day in the Jewish calendar will be observed, Monday, by Edmonton Jews, and members of their race throughout the world. This is Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement.

On this day every Jew petitions God for forgiveness that he may begin his life anew for the coming year. The day is marked by fasting and prayer.

Memorial services, Hazkorath Neshomoth, are also held at that time, in memory of loved ones who have died.

The Jewish New Year, Rosh Hashanah, was celebrated last week-end, and began the ten days of repentence.

quarters, are given in the words of the Assiniboine's commanding officer, as he described them to an officer on his return to port.

SAW SHIP SUNK

"Assiniboine" had been sent off from the convoy to pick up six stragglers, Lieutenant-Commander Stubbs related. "They were forty or fifty miles away and as we got to them we saw one go down torpedoed. We searched the area but found no trace of the attacker."

Nothing else happened that day, but the following morning an object was sighted and it proved to be a sub. The conning tower was visible at six miles range, so "Assiniboine" altered course and steamed in pursuit, opening fire immediately with the afterward 4.7.

"He dived fairly close" said Lieutenant-Commander Stubbs, "so we dropped two depth charge patterns over the spot. Then we searched but saw nothing."

It was five-thirtyish in the evening when Yoeman of Signals, William Cavanagh, of Halifax, sighted another conning tower at 1,000 yards range.

"We dashed off again in pursuit and as we closed in he dived," the commanding officer continued. "Then the fog shut down.

"We did a turn to port and came out of the fog and there he was at half mile range," he went on. "We went for him at full speed with the intention of ramming, but lost him again in a fog bank. I ran Assiniboine on to what I thought was the spot where I had last seen him, but I had evidently turned too soon. "So we altered course a little and went ahead. Then we saw him again, right on the surface and almost a stone's throw away.

"We closed him at 200 yards" he related "and the submarine started an evading action. We kept moving in and just missed ramming his stern. We were so close that we couldn't depress our guns, but we were firing anyway. Then we drew parallel with him and the guns started to boom in earnest on both sides.

"From my perch on the bridge I could see the German commander plainly in the conning tower, but a short time later he was killed by a shell from one of our 4.7's which struck the conning tower. The Nazis concentrated their fire on our bridge and the first few shots started a fire on the starboard side. This interfered with our fire control and so we had to resort to quarter firing, each gun operating independent of the other.

"With all our guns blazing, our point five gunners kept spraying the submarine's decks.

TORPEDO MISSES

"I saw one of our 4.7's hit the conning tower again and at this time the U-boat decided to take a gamble and dive. We then started a criss-cross action. We crossed his stern several times but I think we were too close for him to use his torpedo tubes. (Some members of "Assiniboine's" crew reported having seen the wake of a torpedo as it passed the destroyer's stern early in the action). He was very close to us and we knew we had him taped."

While Lieut. Commander Stubbs was manoeuvring for an opportunity to ram, an able seaman, Michael Scullion, of Verdun, Quebec, found his opportunity. He saw the submarine looming up and got her on the sights of his 4.7 gun. The shell went into the U-boat's bows.

She continued, however, to fight, until Assiniboine was in position to ram.

(According to the seamen who manned the throwers, one of the charges bounced onto the deck of the submarine, then rolled off and exploded at the depth set. This gives some indication of how close the U-boat was to the destroyer during the action.)

"By this time the Germans had had enough and had lined themselves along the deck with their hands held high (this was no Nazi salute.) They were all wearing their escape apparatus. Then, as the Nazis plunged into the sea, the submarine went up by the stern, shook for a second and took the last plunge."

All the survivors were rescued.

Lieutenant Commander Stubbs paid tribute to his ship's company. "They cheered so hard every time Assiniboine scored a hit that they must have struck fear into the hearts of the Nazis," he said. "The coxswain staged a wonderful show. The shells were whining all around him and the bridge structure was ablaze, but he carried out every command as if it were a normal Sunday morning." The coxswain is Chief Petty Officer Max Bernays, R.C.N. of Halifax.

"The fire party had extraordinary success in extinguishing the fire on the bridge. The gunners did a remarkable job. I cannot speak too highly of the men who served in Assiniboine in that action," he declared.

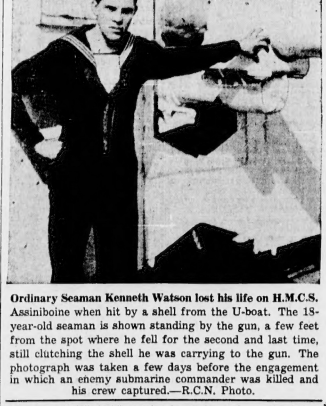

German U-Boat Rammed, Crew Captured By Canadian Destroyer in Fierce Duel

Killed by U-Boat Shell

Ordinary Seaman Kenneth Watson lost his life on H.M.C.S. Assiniboine when hit by a shell from the U-boat. The 18-year-old seaman is shown standing by the gun, a few feet from the spot where he fell for the second and last time, still clutching the shell he was carrying to the gun. The photograph was taken a few days before the engagement in which an enemy submarine commander was killed and his crew captured.—R.C.N. Photo.

Coxswain Praised by Commander

Although shells were whistling all around him and the wheelhouse was a fiery furnace, Chief Petty Officer Max Bernays, H.M.C.S. Assiniboine's coxswain, stood by the helm and carried out to perfection every order issued from the bridge. Thus the skilful manoeuvring of the Canadian ship was, in the end, responsible for the destruction of the U-boat. Bernays wins great praise from his commanding officer. Note shell damage to armour at upper right.—R.C.N. Photo.

Wounded in Sea Battle

The U-boat gunner who "winged" Ordinary Seaman Stanley Gallant (above) was later brought on board H.M.C.S. Assiniboine as a prisoner. The ships were so close during the engagement that gunners could see the enemy's faces clearly. Gallant was hit in the arm as he was reaching for ammunition. He is a native of Prince Edward Island.—R.C.N. Photo.

SEAMAN HERO

18-Year-Old Lad Died Still Clutching Shell

AN EASTERN ATLANTIC PORT, Sept. 19.—This was his first ship and his first time in action but, with the boyish exuberance characteristic of his 18 years, Ordinary Seaman Kenneth Watson, took it all in his stride.

And as he lay dying beside his gun on the forecastle deck of H.M.S.C. "Assiniboine," a shell clutched to his breast, this stripling from Revelstoke, B.C., gave never a whimper.

Watson was the youngest man in the Canadian destroyer—a graduate from the ranks of boy seamen—and he was the only one on board to die during the engagement with the German submarine.

When "action stations" sounded he dashed up the hatchway with a song in his heart. He was running to his gun with the shell when the first shot hit him. The German gun was spewing death from the conning tower of the U-boat and Assiniboine was retaliating, giving her adversary more than she bargained for—the "big stuff," backed up by murderous machine-gun fire.

STILL HUGGED SHELL

Shrapnel from an Oerlikan shell caught Kenneth on the arm and the impact knocked him to the deck. But the young sailor scrambled to his feet, still hugging the shell. He was about to hand the projectile to the gun-loader when he fell again. This time an Oerlikan shell had found its mark, direct.

Revenge for the death of this brave Canadian came quickly and, as the U-boat quivered in her death throes, "Assiniboine's" commanding officer ordered "Y" gun's crew to "give her just one more." So they gave her one more round with a vengeance.

"That one" said a gunner grimly, "was for Kenneth "Wily" Watson. He was known as "Wily" to his messmates.

His funeral shroud was the White Ensign as he lay almost where he had fallen.

The broad Atlantic was on her best behavior next morning as she awaited to receive the remains of Kenneth "Wily" Watson. And with his shipmates mustered on the port side, Lieutenant-Commander J. Hamilton Stubbs, R.C.N., Kenneth's commanding officer, intoned the burial service.

BRAVE MAN

"He was a brave man. He died doing his duty for his country and for his ship. Could any man do more?"

This tribute from his commanding officer bespoke the feeling of Watson's shipmates as a volley rang out overhead and the remains of their gunner here were consigned to the depths of the ocean he had come to love.

Captured Nazi Prisoners Afraid Of Being Shot

AN EASTERN ATLANTIC PORT, Sept. 19.—Prisoners taken by H.M.C.S. "Assiniboine", after she had battled with and rammed a U-boat, were afraid for a few moments the following day that they were going to be shot. They had been told by the German High Command that Canadians did not take prisoners, so when the destroyer's armed guard selected five Nazis from the group held below decks, the others clustered in a corner and whispered. Some shook hands, as if in a last goodbye.

When the five prisoners were returned to their temporary detention quarters and five more selected they all entered into animated conversation and smiles of relief spread over their usually stern faces.

They were being taken in groups of five to the main deck for exercise.

New Outbreaks Flare in India

BOMBAY, Sept. 19—(CP)—Fresh outbreaks of violence in scattered sections of India were reported today by government sources.

The most serious of the disturbances occurred in Agra, where a mob raided an income tax office and set fire to records, and in Ahmedabad, where a home-made bomb exploded beside a railway culvert without doing much damage.

The government, meanwhile, announced that it had imposed a fine of 30,000 rupees (about $8,100) on the town of Kuhlina, 70 miles northeast of Calcutta, for serious damage done the postoffice, railway station and telegraph wires.

Board Officials To Hold Meeting On Beef Problems

SASKATOON, Sept. 19.—(CP)—Members of a 12-man advisory committee to the wartime prices and trade board convene in Saskatoon on Saturday, for an all-day conference on Sunday to review the beef picture across Canada.

The committee met in Ottawa last July 27 and 28, and the present conference has been called to bring members up-to-date on the potential supply of beef in all parts of the dominion.

Alex McMillan of Juniata, head of a dominion government experimental sub-station near Perdue, will be one Saskatchewan member of the committee at the conference. A southern Saskatchewan cattle man, probably from Maple Creek, was thought likely to be a second delegate.

Lymburn Raps Government For Higher Alberta Taxes; Failure to Meet Promises

"The Social Credit government has not been able to implement a single promise on which it was elected, but it asks to be judged on its record apart from promises. It is entitled to credit for continuing and enlarging services initiated by previous governments. If it had not done so it would have been remiss because it has been in power during a time when government revenues have been buoyant, and when it comes to taxing the people it makes the previous governments look like pikers," J. F. Lymburn, K.C., Independent party candidate in the Edmonton by-election, stated at a meeting held Friday evening at the South Edmonton library.

It has increased enormously the cost of government to the people. It collected by taxation, fees and other forms of revenue $6,700,000 more in 1941 than was collected in 1935. It spent in salaries and wages in 1941 $1,300,000 more than was spent in 1935, Mr. Lymburn stated.

It increased administration costs between 1935 and 1941 by $1,500,000, and cannot show any corresponding increases in services that are of benefit to the people, he added.

Direct taxation has been increased tremendously, he said, and that in 1935 a farmer paid $106.12 in municipal taxes, and that this had been increased to $252.03 in 1942.

Alfred Speakman, Independent party M.L.A. for Red Deer, and J. Percy Page, party member for Edmonton, appealed for support of Mr. Lymburn on election day, and urged all voters to get out and exercise their franchise.

Notwithstanding the excuses offered by the C.C.F. party for responsibility for this by-election in wartime, the general opinion is that there was no justification for forcing it upon the people. The objective of the C.C.F. is to do for Alberta what the government of New Zealand has done for that country. Alberta is merely a local government and no comparison can properly be made between it and New Zealand.

The comparison, if any, is between the dominion of Canada and New Zealand and no fair comparison can be made between these two countries because the circumstances of the countries are totally different.

The New Zealand government won its way into power by making promises such as the C.C.F. candidate has been making in this bye-election but responsibility has a very sobering effect and the government of New Zealand is now finding that its hope of a shortcut to Utopia is a vain one and that its promised methods will have to be abandoned. As an individual the difference between a candidate making a promise and a minister's viewpoint after being placed in a position of responsibility.

The prime minister of New Zealand who used to be heard proclaiming that the money spent would have to be brought into relation with production and make possible good times for all, has now changed his theme song and has been saying 'Some people here have funny ideas about finance and think that by using us to use the country's credit.'

NO EXCHANGE VALUE

Today in Canada, New Zealand currency cannot be exchanged through the banks. It can only be exchanged through the New Zealand supply commission in Ottawa. If you went into a bank in Edmonton for the purpose of exchanging some New Zealand currency for Canadian currency, you would be told that the only way you could exchange same would be by communicating with the commission in Ottawa.

The minister of finance of New Zealand, Mr. Nash, has made it plain that New Zealand dissipated her reserve in peace time. This was done in a vain effort to live up to the election promises but it resulted in New Zealand entering the war with nothing on hand and with the prospect that living standards would have to be reduced unless the workers not only maintained production but increased same by at least $35,000,000 per year.

The plea that labor should have a representative in the legislature to voice its views does not come very well from the C.C.F. Labor already has a duly accredited representative in the person of Mr. Morrison, the member for Edson, and it is to be remembered that the C.C.F. put a candidate in the field to oppose Mr. Morrison at the last election and the Independents stayed out of the field.

The amount of money available for any government activity is determined by the legislature and in 1932 the amount voted for the mothers' allowances was $453,700. Government revenues were at their lowest ebb at that time. Indeed if the C.C.F. had been in office in Canada in 1932-33 and had turned over to the workers the entire income of the nation, it would not have given them as much as they received in 1929. Hogs were selling at two cents a pound in Alberta and a farmer was getting 25 cents net for wheat.

LIVE WITHIN MEANS

A department of government, like a good housewife, must live within its means. If the housewife has not the money to buy the things she usually can afford she has to spread the available money around to the best advantage. In 1932 the department in its anxiety to take care of all the mothers whose claims had come in, in increasing numbers owing to the hard times, spent not only the whole grant of $435,700 voted by the legislature, but spent an additional $50,000 over and above the amount voted, but even this increased amount was not sufficient to take care of all the claims.

It was a choice of continuing to pay the full amount of the allowance to those mothers whose claims had already been admitted and leaving the additional claims without anything or making the best use of the money available and spreading it around to cover all the claims. This resulted in a cut of 100 per cent.

The mothers' allowance grant in that year was not cut down, it was actually increased by $50,000, provided not by the legislative vote but by special warrant.

With regard to the Soldiers' candidate, Mr. Gibson, I would like to say, that he is eminently qualified to represent the returned men as no other man knows more intimately than he does the joys and sorrows and the needs of the men who have borne the brunt of the battle in the last Great War and their dependents.

LIBERAL PARTYISM

The Liberal standard bearer is the champion of partyism which I again submit has no place in our provincial life. His election would bring the strength of the Liberal party up to three, the two other Liberals having been elected on the Independent slate in 1940. There are 18 Independent members and the group is the official opposition in the legislature.

I would again urge that the interests of the province should be placed above the interest of any party and that it is vital to the interests of the province that the responsible elements in our life should be united in one group.

THE GOVERNMENT'S RECORD

The government is entitled to credit for continuing and enlarging the government services initiated by previous governments. If they had done so they would have been very remiss because they have been in power during a time when government revenues have been buoyant and when it comes to taxing the people they take the previous government look like pikers.

It has to be remembered that the Social Credit government has not been able to implement a single promise on which they were elected. They admit this but ask you to consider their record apart from their promises. They undoubtedly have increased the cost of government to the people enormously.

As I have already pointed out they collected by taxation, fees, etc., $6,700,000 in 1941 that they was collected in 1935. They spent in wages and salaries in 1941 $1,300,000 more than was spent in 1935. They spent $30,000 more in advertising; $8,000 more in travelling expenses and automobile transportation. The value of autos owned by the government in 1935 was $44,000, the value in 1941 was $114,000, an increase of $70,000. They spent $25,000 on new automobiles in 1941 being $23,000 more than was spent in 1935.

In 1939 the payments to members for indemnities, etc., amounted to $25,000 more than in 1935. These items picked at random from the public accounts show an increase of $1,500,000 in administration costs as between 1935 and 1941 and the government cannot show any corresponding increase in services that are a benefit to the people.

TAXATION INCREASES

The following is a specimen statement of the increase in direct taxation that has resulted from the policies of the present government. A farmer in 1935 paid in municipal taxation $106.12; in 1938, $121.28; in 1937, $122.42; in 1938, $118.73; in 1939, $191.92; in 1940, $207.25; in 1941, $255.77; and in 1942, $252.03.

I understand each of the candidates has received a request from the associated temperance forces of Alberta asking them to make a public statement in answer to the question.

"What policy do you advocate the dominion and the provincial governments should adopt concerning the manufacture, transport, sale and consumption of intoxicating liquors?"

The control of the liquor traffic is a headache for any government at any time, but surely at a time when the civilized world is threatened with a complete blackout and our consumption of tea and coffee is rationed, our provincial government should step in and curtail the sale of intoxicating liquors.

The gross receipts of our provincial government from the sale of liquor in 1941 amounted to $7,500,000 more than was received by the previous government in 1935, and though the report of the liquor board for the period up to 31st March, 1942, must be in the hands of the premier it has not been made public.

I advocate an immediate curtailment in the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor throughout the dominion and wherever possible the transformation of the manufacturing plants into producers of munitions of war.

SHOULD TAKE LEAD

Our provincial government, in view of the religious activities of the premier and some of his associates, should take the lead and initiative in promoting a conference of the dominion and of the other provinces to decide upon a joint course of action calculated to aid the war effort in this regard.

I am informed that in Cairo the oasis, where our thirst-crazed, sand swallowed heroes, who fight under conditions that can only be likened to hades, spend their leaves, the bar is always closed down except for two hours in the middle of the day and two hours in the evening. In the old land the hours of sale are greatly curtailed.

THE INDEPENDENT CITIZENS ASSOCIATION

The objective of the Independent Citizens Association is to bring together in one group, the best average citizens of Alberta who still believe that there are certain fundamentals in public life that are worthwhile and that it is essential to preserve the amenities of public life and restore the good name and credit of the province, if we are to enter into and take our proper place, first, in assisting to win the war, second, in facing effectively the problem of readjustment and rehabilitation of our soldiers when peace comes, and third, in taking full advantage of the unquestioned prospects that lie ahead of our fair province in the years to come.

In my view this could best be accomplished by forgetting party and gathering together around the conference table a group of men from all parts of the province, freed from responsibility of any kind to any party.

As a final word, may I repeat what I said in my opening broadcast, that the remedies for the ills that afflict humanity the world over, do not lie in any one single scheme of political, economic or social organization, but in the hearts and wills of men and women as they set up that has for its foundation obedience to God's will, involving loving one's neighbor as oneself will eliminate, so far as possible, poverty, hardship, fear of insecurity, cruelty, selfishness and greed and no system not so founded can ever bring relief to suffering humanity.

Mr. Percy Page, in a brief speech, said that "in any democracy, the strength of the government depended not merely upon the number and ability of its own members, but also upon the number and ability of the opposition members. History has shown that when the margin between the two groups is too great, the efficiency of government suffers. I think my Liberal friends," he said, "would be among the first to admit that a real deal of the vitality of the national government has been sapped due to a preponderance of numbers, and a corresponding weakness in the opposition. Debating power of the opposition."

He argued that a somewhat similar situation had arisen in Alberta, where the government already has an unwieldy majority. We must have strength to build up a united opposition. If you elect any other opposition candidate than Mr. Lymburn, you are merely breaking down the opposition instead of consolidating it," he said.

The Independents now constitute the official opposition, and by returning an Independent on Tuesday, Mr. Lymburn will join Mr. Speakman—a man who has had nine years of cabinet experience—you will not only strengthen the opposition numerically, but you will, at the same time, do Alberta a genuine service by sending to the legislature a man of long experience and possessing marked ability, Mr. Page stated.

SEES APATHY

Mr. Page stated that, in his opinion, the only thing that would defeat Mr. Lymburn would be the apathy of the electors. "No man, regardless of his ability, can be elected if you remain at home. See that you vote yourselves, and encourage your neighbors to do likewise," he concluded.

Text of Mr. Speakman's speech follows:

Mr. Lymburn will not stand alone if elected at this time. He will be an honored member of the Independent group which has been strengthening that group by his character and ability, and by his intimate knowledge of public affairs gained by his experience as attorney-general of this province for a period of about nine years, an experience which would be of particular value to the legislature at this time, when we have no attorney-general in the assembly, save in name alone.

He would be strengthened in turn by the co-operation and support of his fellow members, who form the official opposition, and whose influence is already being felt in our public life. I am particularly happy in the fact that the association represents the Edmonton branch of the Independent Citizen's Association of Alberta in this contest, as in this way he is linked up with a provincial wide organization, composed of tens of thousands of the thinking men and women of Alberta, who have as their joint objective a co-operative citizenship, working together for the best welfare of the province.

Neither the members of the citizens association, nor those who represent them in the legislature have any personal axe to grind, or favor to seek, when representing special class, interest or party, but they do represent the average decent citizenship of this province.

CONVICTION GROWING

It is the growing conviction of men and women the province over, that political partyism, as we know it, has little if any place in provincial public life, and that conflicting economic theories, whether they be state socialism or Social Credit, are largely federal in their implications and should not divide us or distract us in dealing with provincial problems.

And so these men and women the province over have come together in a Citizen's Association, in which all may co-operate, regardless of past opinions or federal affiliations, and for the sole purpose of securing good administration, honest and progressive legislation, and an intelligent and effective solution of our provincial problems, long neglected in the clash of party strife. Provincial problems and policies are based essentially upon good administration, they are concerned with the services which our people require.

Roads and bridges, health and education, comfort to the aged, the unfortunate and the helpless, the protection of the weak, sound and progressive agricultural policies and the development of our natural resources, and when we consider the growing importance of our forests, our coal and our oil, in the national as well as the provincial economy, we can see the need of wisdom and of foresight in their development.

To provide these services, and those of a like nature, fairly, intelligently and economically, is our task, and all of these are matters of good business rather than of political argument. It has been suggested by some who oppose us, that they alone are interested in the welfare of the people, in health services, old age pensions, and aid to the widowed and the fatherless.

CITIZENS BENEFIT

This, of course, is not so. We represent the average citizen, and it is they who would benefit by these services. But we remember also, that it is they who must pay for all that is done, so all we may honestly state, is that we would develop and extend these services, when, and to the extent that this may be done without too onerous taxation.

It is our conviction also, that only by co-operating as citizens can we, as a province, make full contribution toward Canada's war effort. To do our part in this gigantic conflict which all we live in at stake, requires that we mobilize all our resources, financial, material, physical and moral, and utilize them to the full for the purpose of achieving victory.

To do this we must forget those things which may divide us, namely political animosities and ambitions which now sem so petty, and co-operate as citizens to accomplish our purpose. And provincial problems and policies have their place in this total war. It is obvious that the province which has set its house in order, and has applied intelligence and common sense to its own affairs, the province which has governed itself with honesty, efficiency and economy, is one that province which can make its maximum contribution to Canada and to democracy in this the time of testing.

May I urge further, that all of you should exercise next Tuesday, those rights of citizenship which we are now defending in battle, and see to it that you cast your vote. We fail in this to proclaim yourselves unworthy of those rights.

If you agree with me that Mr. Lymburn's qualities are those we require in public life, and that the things for which we stand, a co-operative citizenship, honesty, humanity and efficiency in government, are worthy of support and reflect your own best thoughts, then work and vote for Mr. Lymburn, the Citizen's candidate.

Tin Lizzy Race Will be Staged For War Funds

Limiting entries to 25 cars and presenting four events, the Model T race meet is announced today. Under the direction of the Lions' Club and Junior Chamber of Commerce to raise money for their war activities the Tin Lizzie derby offers handsome prizes, totalling $500, to winners of various events.

First four cars in the opening three races will receive an opportunity to compete in the Northern Alberta championship race, the final event of the program.

Entries are invited from city, town and village, but just the first 25 will be accepted and would-be contestants are reminded that it's the early Tin Lizzie that makes the grade!

SAVES GASOLINE

While the primary object of Edmonton's first Model T race meet is to raise funds for war activities, the event will also result in a marked saving of gasoline and tires. It is estimated that some three or four thousand cars will be kept off the streets and highways for the whole afternoon—which, in rough, figures out to about 37,500 miles of travel eliminated!

Information about rules, regulation and particulars can be obtained at 311 McLeod building or by phoning 25331, the race meet headquarters.

AT FAIR GROUNDS

Through the co-operation of the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Thanksgiving Day feature will be staged at the fair grounds race track, and the program will be fired at 1:30 in the afternoon. From then on, race fans in Edmonton are promised one of the most unique forms of sports ever presented in Northern Alberta and already, in garages throughout city and country, overhauling is underway—actual building is going on as enthusiasts make up that old Model T for the battle of the flivvies.

Gordon Smeltzer, well known Edmonton sportsman, is chairman of the race meet committee. He contends that "it's a patriotic endeavor that provides plenty of excitement and entertainment."

Major And Minor Notes—By John Oliver

MUSICIANS, and listeners in general, will welcome the announcement, made on his appointment, by Dr. James S. Thomson, the new manager of the CBC, that he would investigate the whole system, with the hope of improving it. This is good, and it is to be hoped that the probe will be thorough. There is much that will bear cutting and many places in which the system as a whole, and the programs in particular, can be improved. Dr. Thomson, as president of the University of Saskatchewan, will bring a fresh and a western viewpoint to bear on the investigation, although, there is little doubt that in the long run, the allegedly wise men of the east, will impose their views upon him, and the west, as usual, will come off second best. However, while there is life there is hope, and as hope is the last thing that forsakes the human breast, one may look for improvements.

First and foremost, the new manager should see that CBC programs are available to listeners—if they want them. There is exacted from each radio owner, an annual license fee of $2.50. This money goes to the CBC and forms part of its general revenue fund. In return, it is the duty of the CBC to supply those who pay the fee with such programs etc. as they are entitled by reason of payment of the license fee. There is a CBC station at Watrous, Sask., which of course, carries all CBC originations in the west. But that station is seldom heard in Alberta in the daytime and the evening reception is poor, although it is alleged the station is powerful enough to carry through to Japan. However, the facts do not bear this out.

Thus, with Watrous as good as being non-existent to this part of the country, it is left to the three city, privately-owned radio stations in their turn to carry the programs. These private stations may or may not carry CBC programs, as they desire, with the exception of a few "musts" for which the corporation contracts.

As the private stations are not in business for their health they quite rightly from their standpoint, refuse to carry CBC programs if they can sell the time commercially at a greater profit to themselves. That is beyond criticism from their standpoint. But from the public's standpoint it is not. Let whatever will, listen to the private stations. But, the CBC having compelled some of us to pay $2.50 per year, is bound to see that its programs reach all those who pay the fee and who desire to listen. This is not being done.

As a result, music lovers here have gone all summer without hearing regular Sunday concerts by the New Symphony from New York. The broadcast of Toscanini playing the new Shostakovich Symphony was not heard here. In short, many fine programs from across the line were not heard. This is a shame, and the CBC should take immediate steps to see that all its programs are made available. The CBC should not impose on private stations, the task of selecting entertainment to give the public that pays for CBC licenses and products. Surely the public, having paid its fees, is entitled to receive all CBC programs and not those which the private stations in their wisdom decide should be heard.

Another phase of CBC activity that should be investigated is the centralization of programs. Several years ago the corporation decided a policy of centralization of organizations, concentrating such organizations, for the most part, at Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. Once in a while programs originate in other places, but the large percentage come from the four points mentioned. The CBC as a national institution, should bend every effort to encourage native talent. It does give some encouragement, but very little.

With programs concentrated mainly at four points, it is essential that an artist, to gain a hearing, must live at, or move to, one of those points. It is not worth their while to do so for the limited engagements they might get. So, they do not move, and get no chance to be heard, and the listeners get no chance to hear them. Those already resident at the concentration points are fortunate. It is a good thing to hear artists in various parts of the country and to compare them. Scant opportunity is available for this.

As a result, from Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver, there come week after week, month after month, and year after year, programs by the same artists. There is no quarrel with them. They are good artists. But the same group in each of the four points appear to be allotted the major share of the programs. The same leaders, the same soloists and the same types of programs go on and on indefinitely.

Surely there must be a greater variety of artists even in the four points mentioned. And most certainly there are artists in other cities: Calgary, Saskatoon, Regina, Ottawa, London, Hamilton and many other places, just as capable as those who are now in the air, and more so. No doubt it is easier for CBC officials to keep the programs centralized, and it is said production costs are less. But in the total CBC budget, the difference in production costs as they are now, and in spreading out the programs, would not be great. Officials, in defence of concentrating, have contended that the public does not care where the programs come from, and who provides them, so long as they are good.

Lucille Cote, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Cote, 10168 107 street and pupil of Mme. Jenny LeSaunier, who won the silver medal awarded by the Toronto Conservatory of Music for the student obtaining the highest mark in Grade IX, in the examinations held in this province last June.

That is true, to some extent. But when the programs are not always good, and when there is little variety in artists and their programs year in and year out, it gets to the point where listeners do not care. One could listen—if the CBC permitted—to the New York Philharmonic, Richard Crooks, Vivian Della Chiesa and others indefinitely, but one cannot put the general run of CBC programs in the same class as the top drawing cards.

There are some other points that merit attention. There is a field for talks, but let them be interesting and by speakers familiar with subjects on which they converse. There are too many commentators talking about things too far away from them, and when, of necessity must base their remarks on newspaper stories which already have been read by the listeners. Thus there is monotony and repetition. The organ is an instrument that, for scientific reasons is not well adapted to the microphone, and noble instrument though it is, it should be used sparingly. These are a few points which it is hoped will be probed by the new manager of the CBC. He has taken on a formidable task and the good wishes of all sorely-tried license holders will go with him.

Federal Officials Conducted on Tour Of Turner Valley

CALGARY, Sept. 19.—(CP)—Federal government officials, headed by Hon. Colin Gibson, minister of revenue, got a firsthand view of the oil industry in Turner Valley yesterday afternoon when they visited the field as guests of the Alberta Petroleum Association.

The party visited the Royalties crude oil discovery well when R. A. Brown, Sr., explained the field's development and told of the first oil strike. They then went to Home 13, where they watched the drilling rig in operation and later inspected the Major Oil Tank farm. At this point a demonstration of what a well looks like when it is being "brought in" was given by releasing a quantity of oil and gas down the flare line where it flamed 200 feet in the air.

Hon. N. E. Tanner, Alberta minister of lands and mines was in the party.

Hull Asks Japan For Full Rights To Aid Captives

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—(AP) —Secretary of State Cordell Hull announced Japan would permit the United States freely permits Red Cross relief to reach Japanese prisoners here and urgently demanded to know whether Tokyo would "grant full reciprocity."

This government desires to point out that the dietary habits of Americans are different from those of the Japanese people," said Hull's message, sent on behalf Switzerland, "and that this government is accordingly anxious to supplement the diet of prisoners by supplies of a type more characteristic of the usual American diet."

"MAN OF PEOPLE" Speakers Urge Support For Soldiers' Candidate At Spirited City Rally

Election of W. "Paddy" Griffin in the by-election next Tuesday was urged by several speakers at a meeting in the Canadian Legion Memorial Hall Friday night, attended by more than 200 men and women, who expressed spirited enthusiasm for the soldiers' and ex-servicemen's candidate.

More than 20 representatives of women's war service auxiliaries were seated on the speaker's platform and when "Paddy" Griffin arose to deliver his address he was greeted by prolonged applause, punctuated by whistling and cries of 'good old Paddy."

Something of the fire that burned in old-time political rallies swept through the gathering, with many members of the audience making impromptu speeches on behalf of Mr. Griffin.

WOMAN CHEERED

One lady, who did not give her name, was loudly cheered when she walked from the back of the hall to the platform to urge the women "to work hard for Paddy Griffin's election." She declared: "I don't know Mr. Griffin. I have never seen any of you here before, but I do know we will have to stick together if the returned soldier is to get a fair show." No one wanted to have anything to do with the man with the returned soldier's pin after the last war and that must not happen again, the woman declared amid cheers.

The meeting had as chairman, James Ross, Edmonton barrister, who also delivered an address. Mr. Ross was introduced as a man who did not serve in the last war, but who had two sons overseas in this war, one of whom is now listed as missing. The other is in an R.C.A.F. bomber squadron.

Others who addressed the meeting briefly were: Mrs. A. Sachse, representing women's war auxiliaries; J. Phizackerlie, member of the Canadian Corps Association; J. C. Macdonald, president of the New Veterans' branch of the Canadian Legion, and campaign manager for "Paddy" Griffin, and Carl E. Berg, past president of Edmonton Trades and Labor council, and secretary of the Alberta Federation of Labor.

General theme of all the speeches was that the time is long overdue for a thoroughly independent soldiers' representative in the provincial legislature.

Record of Mr. Griffin was praised by each speaker, who stressed the fact that no other person in the city is better qualified to represent veterans of the last war and the boys returning from the present struggle.

NEED BETTER DEAL

Veterans of the present war will have to be given a better deal in the way of rehabilitation than those who fought in the last war if our country is to be worth living in and similar benefits will need to be provided for widows, wives and children of the men who fight Canada's battles, it was contended by all the speakers.

Confidence that Mr. Griffin will be elected on Tuesday was expressed by all the speakers, providing wives and other relatives of the men in the armed services turn out and vote.

"I feel that I am the only independent candidate in the election," Mr. Griffin declared at the outset of his speech.

"I despise the word politician, after observing what has been done in the name of politics in the past 25 years. The veterans have been fooled by the politicians for all of those years," he continued.

The cream of Canada's manhood is now fighting on all the battlefronts of the empire, but one finds that many people have little sympathy with the returned men, Mr. Griffin stated. He called attention to the fact that many returned men are still trying to pay for land they received after the last war and declared emphatically that a far better system of land rehabilitation would have to be in effect this time than after the first Great War.

HELP FOR WIDOWS

Widows of returned men should receive far more consideration, Mr. Griffin declared. Many of these were left at 35 in a state of broken health after a desperate battle to raise a family, he claimed. Under the present system they receive little or no consideration, he said.

There is real hardship in cases where a widow has boys of 15 years of age, as in many cases these can not find work, but are a direct burden on the mother, he said.

Mr. Griffin said he would like to give credit where it is due and stated he had found the superintendent of Mothers' Allowances very sympathetic with other officials in the department also sympathetic in many individual cases he had brought to their attention.

Following is Mr. Griffin's address in full:

I want it understood right now that I am not out to criticize any party or person running in this by-election. That is not my policy. I believe my opponents are all men of good will and good intentions. But I also believe that if any class of people is entitled to direct representation in the government of our country, that class is the service men and women, the ex-service men and women, and their dependents. We were late in coming to a decision to run a candidate in this election. But it is not too late for you, the wives and sweethearts, fathers and mothers, sons and daughters, and friends in general, of the men and women who have rallied to the defence of Canada, to elect the veterans' and ex-service-men's candidate on Tuesday.

VOICE IN BUSINESS

I have the honor to be that candidate. When the veterans of this war decided to do what we veterans of the last war should have done 25 years ago—ask the people of Canada for a voice in the nation's business—they did me the honor of asking me to carry their banner. I am doing this to the best of my ability and, if I am elected, I will continue to do the best of my ability the duties that fall to my lot and endeavor, in every way possible, to justify the confidence they have placed in me.

Rehabilitation plans for returned men—and they are returning in a steady stream now—will take an important place from now on in all government programs. You cannot train men into good fighting machines, change their whole conduct of life, then bring them back and turn them into normal citizens overnight.

It is not enough to say, "Here is a job. Stay on it and be a good boy." It cannot be done that way. Some men have more nerve and coolness than others and will be able to readjust themselves without much difficulty. But there will be thousands of others, of different temperament, who will never be able to lead completely normal lives again.

They will always be restless and unsettled. To the man on the street, they will appear to be physically o.k., and for that matter, many of them will be. But there may be a nervous condition that may take years to overcome and which, in some cases, will be a permanent affliction. We will have to prevail on the people of Canada and their governments to have tolerance and patience with such men. This is something we have had trouble with ever since the last war. Also the plight of the families of such men should be considered. The change in the personality of the husband and father has a terrible effect on the home. I know; for I have seen it over and over again. There must be provision made on very broad lines to take care of such families.

CARE FOR WOUNDED

Then again, we have thousands of cases from the last war, where men were discharged as fit, but broke down a few years later. There must be some provision made for these cases too. During the period between the end of hostilities and discharge, a man may have a fairly easy time and get into pretty good shape. However, the real test of his health and strength lies in his ability to do a full day's work and it may be found, some time after discharge, that he is not able to stand up to it. Or suppose he does need hospitalization. He gets it for one year. Then if he is not pensioned, he is discharged as medically fit. If his sickness comes back on him—as in many cases it is bound to do—he is not entitled to any more free hospitalization. What then?

I'll tell you what then. The returned man who, for one reason or another, cannot get re-established, must sooner or later, under existing conditions, become a charge on the province, the municipality or the city. It is up to these bodies therefore to see that provisions for rehabilitation are wide enough and big enough, or that the federal government takes full responsibility for the welfare of men and women returning from the war.

Either way, the provincial house is going to have to take a lively interest in the business of rehabilitation. And that is one place I could serve your interests well if you will give me the power to do it. My welfare work of the past 15 years has given me ample and reliable information with which to press the needs for adequate rehabilitation schemes and I would like to place this information in quarters where it might do some good. A man who knows the problems of ex-servicemen should be in every legislature and in the federal government right now. And remember this, every man and woman who is on service now, will be an ex-service man and woman in due course.

MAN OF PEOPLE

However, do not ever think that I am out for the servicemen and servicemen's dependents only. I am a man of the people and I would consistently support any movement for the betterment of the people as a whole, no matter by what party or person, the movement is promoted. Everything should be done to guard and improve the health of the people. Health is one of the biggest assets in any person's life and a high standard of national health is absolutely essential to the well-being of the country. Therefore, I am going to support—as I have always done—health insurance, state medicine and health measures of every kind. They are all for the benefit of the province, and the country as a whole.

Regarding old age pensions, I must thank the present government for granting an extra five dollars. But even with that extra five dollars, the old age pension is still far too small and a person has to wait far too long to get it.

My idea of an old age pension is that a person who has been medically examined and found physically unfit to work and keep himself should get the pension automatically provided he is forty years of age.

Why should such a person drag out a miserable existence and be practically on his death-bed before he is eligible for a pension? For people who are in normal health I favor a pension at 50 years of age, and I mean by a pension, a standard of living that will make old age the season of pleasure and relaxation that old age should be. Aging people are breaking down under the strain of fear and anxiety. I have seen them do it time and time again. For the same reason they are dying prematurely. And God knows to my way of thinking, they are better off dead than placed in old homes or kept alive on the miserable pittances which they are given now.

PREPARE FOR CHANGE

While this may not be the time to make great social changes because of the necessity of the war effort, it is time governments and progressive citizens should be forming committees and getting ready to put social changes into effect at the earliest possible moment after victory is won.

First, last and all the time, the winning of the war must take precedence over everything else. But our social aims—our social necessities—must not be lost sight of because when the war is over they will be even more important than they are today, if that is possible.

Many returned men have died in the last 25 years because they have been afraid to call a doctor, owing to the expense involved. People are actually afraid to get sick. Whether we elect me or not I will continue to do my very best. It is my second nature to look after the poor.

Mrs. Sachse was loudly cheered, following a short address urging the election of Mr. Griffin. Following is the address of Mrs. Sachse in full:

CHIEFLY FOR WOMEN

I wish to address my brief remarks tonight to women—chiefly to servicemen's dependents, although, perhaps, what I am about to say is hardly necessary. You must know as well as I do that to have our own representative in the legislative assembly would probably strengthen our appeal for a square deal for the armed forces and for ourselves. You may think that a voice in the provincial government would be of little value to us since all the laws governing our particular affairs are made in Ottawa, but such is not the case. The voice of "Paddy" Griffin, our candidate, is listened to with respect wherever it is heard and a seat in the legislature would give him a very influential audience.

Within the last week or so many of us have worked at the war services carnival to raise funds for the entertainment of our men and women in uniform. We have also gone out tagging for funds to send Christmas parcels to the men overseas. Now we have it in our power, if we only get out and vote in sufficient numbers to give our men—wherever they may be—something they will prize beyond any other gift we may offer them.

In the election of "Paddy" Griffin not only Alberta men but men from every province in Canada would rejoice in this tangible evidence that the returned man is at last playing his proper part in civilian life.

Any woman with a loved one in the services is betraying that man or woman if she does not go out and do on Tuesday what they would do themselves if they were here, and that is vote for "Paddy" Griffin. If we lose this fight it will still be good news for our men that we have at last made a start in the right direction. But if we elect him, and it seems very probable now that we will, we will hearten and inspire the men overseas with the promise that they are going to have a definite say in the planning of the post-war world. The name passed around in barracks and outposts wherever Canadians foregather will be Griffin of Alberta.

CHAIRMAN SPEAKS

Chairman Ross said he considered it a great privilege to throw in his lot with those who are seeking to improve the conditions of the ex-service men. He said he would like to reply to one party who had a returned soldier for a candidate and to another party that claimed it has two soldier representatives in the legislature.

"We are supporting a candidate who does not have to answer to any party whip and every party candidate must answer the whip regardless of what he thinks himself," Mr. Ross declared.

Mr. Ross continued as follows:

"We propose to put a man in the legislature to represent the men who fought in the last war and those who are fighting and dying now for a free world where we may live and breath and have our being.

"We hear on every hand that the returned men of the last war did not receive fair treatment. A recent Gallup poll discloses that 45 per cent of Canadian voters do not think that the veterans of the last war received a fair deal and 66 per cent of the voters think that the veterans of the present war are entitled to better treatment this time.

INSURE JUSTICE

"It is necessary that some body of men and women make certain that justice is done. War veterans do not ask for charity. They despise the word. We feel that the men and women who serve should never have to live on the dole.

"No veteran should ever be placed where it is necessary for him to call for charity or relief.

"By their services they have earned better things. Men like myself are prepared to go the limit to see that this scandal is removed from the body politic. Don't let them tell you that these matters are not the concern of provincial governments. The peace, order and good government of the people are responsibilities of the provincial legislators. The attorney general or some other responsible party of the government, could take hold of these matters to see that the returned men get what they are entitled to under dominion statute. With the resources of this province these things are possible.

COALITION URGED

"We hear the cry that we need a coalition at this time. What greater coalition is there than among the men of the armed forces? Men who have been in every school from elementary to university are fully competent to hold every position in government that there is.

"If they are good enough to go overseas and defend these institutions of ours, they are good enough to administer them. Some seem to think these men who are fighting now for us on the battlefronts will return as Red Bolsheviks who will tear the country to pieces. No; they are coming back to build a grander country than the one they left behind.

"There is nothing can break down the spirit like economic insecurity. If men have full employment they will bear up under the hardest trials. What about the mothers of boys who are missing over there? They are being told they can lump it by the pensions department.

"Until that department is torn up, root and branch, there will be no unanimity of purpose in our effort.

"If Paddy Griffin is elected he will be the representative of a loyal body of men and women.

"I am convinced that Mr. Griffin's campaign will start a snowball rolling in the city of Edmonton that will roll to both the Atlantic and the Pacific. It is the bounden duty of returned men to enter politics so that they may build a great nation and see that the affairs of the country cease to be political footballs.

"WILL BE MOUTHPIECE"

Paddy Griffin will be our mouthpiece and a mouthpiece that will not be controlled by any party machine."

Mr. Phizackerlie brought cheers when he described Paddy Griffin as "the first servicemens' candidate with sufficient courage to even run for election, let alone be elected."

Continuing, he said:

"I am convinced that the night Paddy was nominated a representative of the machine that have kept us divided for 25 years, was attempting to do the same thing again by opposing Paddy's entry.

"Paddy" is one candidate that all the other parties are really scared of. I would not step on this platform to support any party candidate, but for Paddy Griffin I have gone with only a few hours sleep each night since the campaign started.

As chairman of the East Post Committee of the Canadian Corps Association I have known Paddy Griffin for a long time. I know there is no antagonism between the Corps, and the Legion, although some would try to make you think so.

BIG HEART

"No one really knows how big "Paddy" Griffin's heart is. How many ministers of the Canadian government have ever visited sick beds of war veterans like Paddy Griffin has? Not one.

"The prime minister has crossed Canada from coast to coast and in all of his speeches I have yet to hear him mention the ex-servicemen. He may have real reason to mention them one of these days.

"I do not really belong on a political platform: I would be more at home up on the Mackenzie or the Arctic. Last year a man offered me a job. He said he would introduce me to the right persons and all I would have to say was that I had always been a Liberal and would always be a Liberal.

"Is that democracy?" (There were cries of "No!")

"Well, it is the kind of democracy we've had for the past 25 years.

"I have no quarrel with the Social Credit Party or any progressive party. They say they have already members who understand the soldiers' problems. Well they have none who understand them as well as "Paddy" Griffin. We are entitled to at least 50 per cent of the seats in the house and should have 75 per cent of the seats in Canada.

NEVER HEARD SHELL

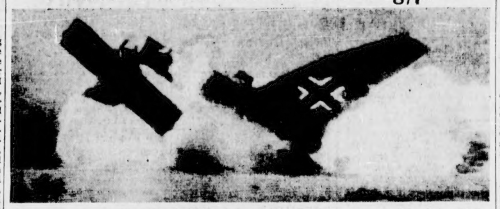

"We have people representing us who never heard the whine of a shell or the thud of a bullet striking the heart of a comrade.

"If we are going to be politicians, then let us be politicians of the new order we hear so much about. We will be the finest message we could possibly send to the boys who are loading on the bombs to Colognize some Nazi city, that Edmonton has sent Paddy Griffin to the legislature. We started this campaign with absolutely nothing, but we will need some funds as we have heavy expenses. I am going to ask that a collection be taken.

Mr. Berg said he had to catch a train for the east but could not leave without saying a few words on behalf of the best friend he ever had, Paddy Griffin.

J. Lynn, president of the Army and Navy Veterans of Canada, was present on the platform.

Another Stuka Bites the Dust in Egypt

Shot down on the Egyptian battlefront by British anti-aircraft gunfire, this Stuka dive-bomber was photographed by a British cameraman on the spot at the moment it crashed. The plane, almost wrecked, burst into flames when it hit the sand. The pilot baled out successfully and was taken prisoner a few minutes later.

Plane Crew Ends Whirlwind Tour Of Canada Cities

MOOSE JAW, Sask., Sept. 19.—(CP)—The R.C.A.F. bomber crew from Saarbruecken, under command of P.O. John Higham, which bombed the German city early this month and then flew to Canada, ended an official tour here yesterday.

P.O. Higham and his crew members, Flt.-Sgt. Karl Sveinson of Elfros, Sask., Sgt. A. Leach of Islington, Ont., Sgt. Don R. Morrison of Kentville, N.S., and Sgt. S. C. Lee of Winnipeg, now will go on leave for a visit with their families.

At the reception for the airmen here yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Higham, parents of the crew commander, were present.

The By-Election

The outcome of the by-election in Edmonton will be to maintain the numerical strength which the combined Opposition groups had in the legislature before the death of the late Mr. D. M. Duggan—or to increase by one the number of Government supporters.

With 36 supporters in a house of 57, the fate of the Government is not involved, nor threatened. It does not need to capture the vacant Edmonton opposition seat, either to ensure its stability or to save its prestige. A majority of 15 is a safe and sufficient margin, ensuring the carrying through of major policies.

On the principle that a fairly strong opposition makes for careful and capable administration, and provides a safeguard against the abuse of power, the strength of the combined opposing groups has been cut to the least. They could have held several more seats without endangering a condition of stalemate or hindering the passage of Government legislation.

There are four Opposition candidates in the field. They differ in party names and in policies. But in the present confused political condition party names are of less than usual significance, and distinctive Opposition policies of little actual and immediate consequence.

These four candidates have one common ground—they are opposed to the Government. That was the common thought in the minds of the parties who nominated them. Should all four be beaten by the scattering of anti-Government votes, this essential object of all the opposing groups of electors will be frustrated, the Opposition in the legislature will be weaker by one vote than it has been, and the Government stronger by one.

Since only one candidate can be elected, it is obvious that voters who wish to maintain the strength of the Opposition will be more likely to attain that object if they pool their votes in support of the candidate most generally acceptable to all these groups of electors.

These considerations strongly recommend Major Buchanan as the first choice of non-Government voters of all groups, and as the second choice for those who may be pledged to other candidates.

Not having been in public life before, Mr. Buchanan has no hang-over prejudices to make him unacceptable in any quarter. He is a long-time resident of Edmonton, a man of irreproachable character, a good speaker, popular in his wide circle of acquaintanceship. His campaign speeches have been clear, convincing and free from needless rancour. He is in every way well qualified to represent Edmonton with satisfaction to the electors and credit to himself.

Major Buchanan has particularly strong claims to the support of returned men and their dependents, and to men now enlisted and the members of their households. He is a veteran of the last war, a holder of the Military Cross, and a member of the Reserve army. As a veteran and as a lawyer he is well equipped to express the views, protect the rights, and present the claims of the fighting men and their families—of the former and the present war alike.

The election of Major Buchanan would preserve the balance of forces in the legislature, and would give the city a thoroughly capable representative to fill the present vacancy. Opposition voters will therefore do well to mark their ballots giving him first place; and second choice in cases where the first choice has been promised elsewhere.

—V—

Stalingrad

It hardly seems possible that the Russians can hold Stalingrad. For ten days they have been fighting without rest on the approaches to the city, often hand-to-hand in the suburbs. Though at the end of the tenth day the enemy was still from 9 to 12 miles from the heart of the great industrial centre, Moscow did not hold out hopes that it could be defended indefinitely.

If it was any part of Russian strategy to compel Hitler to concentrate his striking power against this far eastern sector, this object has been gained. He has massed there tanks, armored divisions, divebombers and guns in numbers as great as there was room to employ. No price, apparently, was considered too heavy, and no risk too serious, as the cost of Stalingrad.

How many thousands of Germans and Hungarians and Italians have died in the inferno may never be known—certainly will not be known while the censors can keep the facts hidden.

That these losses have been enormous, and the destruction of equipment in proportion, is certain. As a demonstration of the Fuehrer's utter disregard for the lives of the people over whom he wields dictator power, no other area of comparable size can have provided a rival. As a lesson to the subject states of what they must expect from his overlordship, it must be particularly severe, for he has thrown their troops into the slaughter as recklessly as his own.

If the Russians can hold Stalingrad, nothing they have yet achieved will stand in history as a comparable example of unconquerable valor.

Remote Control

Governor General Annet of Madagascar is evidently a man of discernment. Ordered by M. Laval to fight to a finish, he did not overlook the point that as the British had the stronger forces it was his finish Laval was talking about. Confronted by this awkward situation, he proposed an armistice "to find means by which we can cease fighting with honor."

This rather open bid for a face-saving arrangement was apparently not at all to M. Laval's liking. The Vichy radio promptly declared the British terms—which perhaps were unknown there—were such that Annet could not even consider them, and the fight must go on. But that the Governor will take this as final may be doubted. He happens to be on the spot while Laval is far from the flying bullets—and can blame Annet for whatever happens.

It can be assumed from his approach to the subject that the Governor has not banged the door against further negotiations, and whatever Vichy may want or think, it is with him the decision really rests. It may even be suspected, with credit to the common sense of both, that he and the British commander are engaging in a little game of finesse, intended to accommodate the Governor's sense of honor while bringing the little war to a speedy end.

—V—

American airmen did a good day's work on Monday when they bombed Kiska, damaging three cargo ships and three submarines, sinking two mine-sweepers, shooting up storehouses and supply dumps, destroying four fighting planes and a patrol plane, and causing troop casualties estimated at 500. This brings to 32 the enemy ships sunk or damaged in the Aleutians, between fogs.

—V—

The Boilermakers' and Iron Shipbuilders' Union of Victoria want Labor Minister Mitchell dismissed. The grievance alleged is that he prevented the Kirkland Lake gold mines being tied up by a strike. The real one probably is that he put in effect measures which keep ship-building going on day and night, Sunday and Monday. To those who are interested in the events only as those affect the war effort, both will seem to be good reasons why Mr. Mitchell should be left where he is.

Free Vote Most Precious Political Possession

Those Who Fail to Exercise It Throw Away Gains of Years.

By HAROLD L. WEIR

If you were asked to designate the one single thing or institution that, more than anything else, sums up and symbolizes all the gains of political evolution over the past several thousand years, what would you say?

You might point to the law of habeus corpus which is designed to safeguard the imprisonment of men without charge and legal trial.

You might point to the laws which Harold L. Weir are formulated to protect the rights of free speech.

You might point to free and compulsory education, to the rights won by labor or to a score of measures that represent hard-won victories over greed and ignorance and darkness.

But great and vital as all these things are, not one of them is the fundamental symbol of civilized progress.

That symbol is the free vote. And it is basic and vital because it guarantees and protects and perpetuates all the other gains.

We Neglect It

One would think that the popular franchise, being the most precious of all our political possessions, would be regarded as a sacred thing. One would think that those men and women who have won it so expensively over a period of generations would consider the exercise of it a great privilege.

One would think, in other words, that every opportunity to vote would be featured by a tremendous rush of men and women, fairly clamoring to exercise this right that has been won so slowly and with such difficulty.

Unfortunately, that is not the case. Familiarity, where the vote is concerned, appears to have bred contempt. For even with the issues that come before the public growing more vital and significant, the tendency is towards a lighter registration of opinion.

In short, we neglect the popular franchise as we neglect no other priceless asset. And when we neglect it, or fail to exercise it, we throw away the gains of years.

Dangers

Now the supreme danger that lies in the failure to exercise the vote, freely and intelligently, arises out of the fact that the democratic machinery of government is supposed to rest entirely upon the public will.

It is conceivable, then, that a democratic government, any democratic government, might impose restrictive conditions upon a public that are much more harsh even than a government without alleged popular authority would dare to do.

It is conceivable that a parliament which acted carelessly or indifferently could be much more of a tyrant than a governing body which had no popular assent at all.

For the parliament or government without popular approval always operates under the fear of revolution. The parliament or government, on the other hand, that has been elected sloppily or unthinkingly assumes all the authority of the public will whether it actually possesses it or not.

To fail to vote or to vote indifferently or unintelligently is to do a very dangerous thing.

You deliver over into the hands of a parliament all the authority of public opinion with none of the mandate of public opinion. You simply write a blank legislative and administrative cheque for a group of men over whom you have no control.

This can be social and political suicide.

Indifference

The curse of democracy is indifference.

That is why Germany and Japan, with a political system that is vicious and obsolete and intrinsically inefficient, are enabled to operate so powerfully against us.

There is nothing wrong with democracy at all, that is with the system of democracy itself. But there is a great deal wrong with the millions of us who neglect to make it work.

For the spark that puts life into democracy is the vote. The vote is the means by which public opinion is legitimately and usefully harnessed to the machinery of our form of government.

When we fail to vote freely and intelligently, we simply fail to give our government the essential life of public opinion.

In that case, we get exactly the kind of government we deserve.

Good citizens of Edmonton will remember on Tuesday that to neglect to go to the polls is to wantonly cast away something that took thousands of painful years to acquire.

"Canadianization"

Editor, Bulletin: An item in your paper of Sept. 12, filed from London, England, caught my attention. It was a dispatch in which Air Marshal Harold Edwards of Canada was explaining the "Canadianization" of the R.C.A.F. overseas and answering objections to his purpose.

He has the right idea and it's long overdue. I enlisted in Sept., 1940, with the R.C.A.F., spent eight months of 1941 attached to the R.A.F. in the Coastal Command, was then returned to Canada on medical grounds and received my discharge July 2, 1942.

Believe me, it is a step in the right direction. The two, R.A.F. and R.C.A.F., do not mix well in the same station and the amount of ill feeling against the English certainly thrives under these conditions. Canadians, not "Colonials," as they term us over there, should certainly be the ones to have our Canadian officers. Any Canadian officers I had dealings with over in England, and that's exception, took after their men. They know the score. My impression of the English officers in the R.A.F. is they are helpful if you can get to them and bring something to their attention. But most of them don't know what is going on as regards the fellows they are in command of.

So here is hoping that Air Marshal Edwards achieves his purpose. Unless proper recognition is given to the Canadians overseas as regards encouragement and promotion, which they seem to be able to get only under R.C.A.F. administration, then the same old thing will still go on. We, Canada and the Old Country, are supposed to have close ties. You won't have any left at all unless this long overdue readjustment is made.

Of course, I am speaking only as one that had to put up with it. If that is taken into consideration you will find this letter makes sense.

Why the Delay?

Editor, Bulletin: Mr. Lymburn, addressing a meeting at Ponoka, Alta., said: "Consideration should also be given to the establishment of family courts away from the atmosphere of the ordinary courts, where family troubles could be dealt with sympathetically and in an understanding manner, with the object of re-establishing homes and preventing the breaks that so often result when such matters are dealt with in the police court or in civil courts."

Agreed! But, Mr. Lymburn, you were attorney general in the Brownlee government. Why didn't you have this law passed?

Again, Mr. Lymburn says that if the home property is in the wife's name she can sell it without her husband's consent, but, if the property is in his name, he cannot sell it without her consent.

Mr. Lymburn, why didn't you bring in a law to protect husbands when you were attorney-general?

Others Carry On

Editor, Bulletin: Accepting "Mr. Britisher's" admonition, "Let none of us forget it."

Let none of us forget, "Mr. Britisher" included, that if it hadn't been for the Australians the main line for the past year and the United States arranging to supply Great Britain on the land lease aid, that it is well within the realm of possibility that the British Empire would have been a thing of the past by now.

The Flying Fortresses, according to all reports are doing a good job over France and western Germany and "the blowing of trumpets and tooting of horns" mentioned by "Mr. Britisher" is merely a figment of the imagination in the mind of a person who apparently is unable to bear hearing any words of commendation, however slight, unless applied to some fellow-Britisher.

All the United Nations are fighting for their very existence at this time and it seems singularly unappropriate to Mr. Britisher sneering at slight words of commendation which have recently appeared in connection with the work the Flying Fortresses have been accomplishing.

Let us hope that this type of individual is extremely rare and will eventually become extinct.

Old Age Pension

Editor, Bulletin: Mr. Roper, in one of his campaign meetings said he would fight in the House for the reduction of the old age pension age to 60 and also for an increase in the pension payable. Mr. Roper must be a Social Creditor. Surely no one can fight harder for these social benefits than the Social Creditors did in the legislature last winter and right along.

Mr. Lymburn still uses Hitler and Mussolini trying to win the seat. I thought this kind of stuff had whiskers two feet long, now he tries to smell it here in the Peace River country. But I am not at all surprised some of the politicians will stoop very low. If I had a vote in this by-election and had intended to vote for Mr. Lay, I would now vote against him at the last minute. "Courageous"

Editor, Bulletin: Mr. H. C. Weir's article in Sept. 14 issue was so good, so absolutely true that I cannot refrain from complimenting him upon it.

If only more of our commentators would be as courageous, and as brutally frank as Mr. Weir is we might—and I say only "might"—rouse the entire population, or at least the English-speaking portion, to a full and understanding realization of the sacrifices necessary if we even just "hope" to win this war.

After three years we are barely starting to do anything about it. The war cannot be won by simply taking a job at good wages somewhere. Someone has to make real sacrifices and it will have to be all of us. Our lives and all we possess, if necessary, to win. Considering the magnitude of the struggle, and the issues at stake, Canada has done very little so about when compared with the sacrifices made by such nations as Russia and China and others when I say I refrain from mentioning in case I am accused of being prejudiced.

I wish Mr. Weir could influence the powers that be to take dictatorial steps to put his ideas into effect at once, but I suppose that is too much to hope for.

We are still asking and pleading (after three years) with the people to put all they have into this war, whereas the people are waiting to be "ordered" to do these things, and in many, many instances they would comply willingly if everyone had to do the same.

Battle of the Sexes

FROM THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

Readers of the Daily News have been waging an all-out debate. The question is: if a woman—the average girl, not Hedy Lamarr—knew how it looked on her, in babushkas, in moccasin shoes, would she be caught dead in them?

We find, from information available exclusively to us, that the critics are almost entirely male. They roar in their charges with the boldness of lions on the loose, but when it comes to the signature, they suddenly become as panicky as rabbits in the hunting season. "Please, on account, use my name—just sign initials or a nom de plume", they beg, and probably with good reason.

For it is our belief that the letters are only a boiling over from a situation that prevails in the homes—that the writers are only saying in print words they would dearly love to speak out face to face. They would, too, if it were not for that rabbit strain of discretion which takes command of the nerves of the sterner sex in domestic crises such as this.

The men—or at least those who take pen in hand—want their women feminine. They like 'em in skirts and in hats that come from a millinery shop and in pumps with high heels. They are confused and upset by the forthright manner in which the women have been taking over man's work since the war began. They don't want to be considered reminded of their own fast slipping position as the dominant male. Thus slacks become a symbol, and the wearer a sort of whipping boy—or is it girl?

As for ourselves, we take no position in this battle of the sexes, and if we did we'd be sure to use a nom de plume.

A Great War Anniversary

FROM THE MONTREAL STAR

Archibald MacLeish, who was formerly Director of the Office of War Information, in a broadcast from Washington on the eve of the anniversary of the Battle of Britain told his own people something of the part Britain has played and that is playing in the great battle for freedom.

Mr. MacLeish has but recently returned from London, having toured Great Britain and seen for himself at the source the true character of the nation's war effort. His address was specifically designed as a counterblast to enemy propaganda which he has found is deliberately directed to efforts to confuse American understanding of her debt to Britain in this war.

Mr. MacLeish paid an inspiring tribute to the British war spirit and the magnificent calmness of the British nation. Britain, he said, in the two years that have passed since that great campaign in the Netherlands which crushed for ever the Nazi dream of world-domination has been transformed from an island of refuge for a desperate defence into a bridgehead for a great offensive. There, he declared, the power of the free peoples of the world is gathering for the blow which will destroy their enemies in Europe.

Mr. MacLeish had some eye-opening figures to quote in refutation of the tiresome slander that Britain is using her Allies do all the fighting. Of the total British Empire casualties in the war to date, which are in excess of 200,000, over seventy per cent are men from the United Kingdom. More than one million British troops are now fighting on various battlefronts around the world. One home in every five in Britain—a total of 2,600,000—has been either damaged or destroyed by bombs.

Although Britain has been fighting for three years, Mr. MacLeish added, she has continued her war production, which until recently was far greater than that of the United States, although the population was only one-third as large. He also gave some details in regard to Britain's economic sacrifices which are eloquent in their impressiveness.

Mr. MacLeish is clearly convinced that there can be but one outcome of the conflict, if the second battle of Britain is fought as the first was fought, "and it will be." If the war is a people's war, he told his hearers, "it is because the people of Britain, together with the people of Russia and the people of China" have made it theirs. . . . We know now how to value and how to judge the whispered rumors and the printed innuendoes which seek to persuade us that the British have done less than their full duty in this war. We know what they have done."

It is by addresses of this kind that there can be best driven home to the minds of the American people a complete realization of Britain's share in holding back the hordes of tyranny. Here is an eminent American speaking to his own people and telling them of what he has seen and learned at first hand. It is the best sort of propaganda that Great Britain could have, and it is to be hoped that it will not be the less effective because it has been so long delayed.

Mr. MacLeish's address may well be read in the light of the statement delivered last week by Mr. Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor and National Service, to the effect that there are 33,000,000 people of working age in Britain between 14 and 65, and 23,400,000 of them are at full-time work for the nation in the armed services, civil defence, industry, agriculture and the auxiliary services—a much higher degree of mobilization than the Germans can show. These 23,400,000 at full-time national work, supplemented by nearly 2,000,000 women doing voluntary work, represent 55 per cent of the population of Great Britain. Another 5 per cent of the population is comprised of housewives, infants and children under 14, aged, sick and crippled.

It has been pointed out that the number of people gainfully employed in the U.S. today is 50,000,000. As fifty-five per cent of the population of the U.S. is 72,000,000, America will have to find another 22,000,000 to go to work in the war effort in order to equal the war effort in Great Britain today.

Stalingrad Is Stalin's Favorite City

By COL. FREDERICK PALMER

Stalingrad is Joseph Stalin's own pet city, named after him. It is the key point on the Volga, symbolic, fabled and cherished river to the Russians. Stalin said that Moscow would not fall, and it did not fall. I understand that he told Prime Minister Churchill at their conference that Stalingrad would not fall and he has stuck to it that it would not fall.

At Stalingrad were built most modern and extensive steel and armament plants. Here are the arms resources drawn on hand for forming a powerful defence line around the city. A few weeks ago Stalin himself inspected them to see how they were progressing.

Volga River transport has facilitated the concentration of larger Russian forces around Stalingrad. Unless the Germans capture the main Caucasian oil fields, they must take Stalingrad and control the Volga to cut off the oil supply route to the Russian army.

The Russians fight to save both oil fields and the supply route. If the Germans fail to take the oil fields and cut the supply route they have not reached their goal of this summer's campaign; that is the issue at white heat in the ferocity of the terrific German assaults and the ferocity of the Russian resistance.

To judge by reading their own recent communiques, the Germans are in a surprise on the immense force of men and arms the Russians had massed around Stalingrad, their inability to gain at their own great concentration, to take Stalingrad by storm may indicate that they aim for a siege against powerful, well-prepared fixed defence lines.

In that case, their infantry will have to attack through successive deep belts to barbed wire under the spray of bullets from chains of machine guns set in concrete pillboxes. Tank charges will face the fire of anti-tank guns equally well emplaced.

All this applies of course if the Russians have guns and material which the latest reports encourage us to think they have. Either in a delaying or prolonged siege defence the Russians have the advantage of being able to dig in for protection while the Germans must attack through open fields of fire. A German airplane bombers can not get Russian troops, tanks and supply columns in the open as they did on the Russian retreat. Ammunition dumps are buried. There are bomb-proof shelters in the active defence area and in the city itself. Surprise manoeuvres by the Germans are more difficult.

Every day Stalingrad holds out the more attrition for the German army on top of the price paid in the conquest of Sevastapol and the Crimea. There will be fewer German soldiers to face the inevitable second land front of the British and American armies.

I do not suppose the Germans do get Stalingrad and the Caucasian oil fields. Stalin, who is a long-range strategist, will have another surprise for them. It will be a retort in kind for the surprise which we indulged in the hope the Axis might be stalled by an oil famine.

Moscow claims to have stepped up the output of the Caucasian fields by the first six months of this year. Since none goes to the German-occupied region of Russia, where immense amounts were consumed, there has been more for the unoccupied regions and for the army. Storage facilities have been provided for reserves of fuel in Russian control in the north, safely out of the present German offensive.

Russia's oil deposits, however, are far from limited to the Caucasian fields. Those in a small compass at Baku afforded the cheapest oil output in the most available location.

What is called a potential "second Baku" of oil deposits, thought to be as large as those in Caucasia, exist in an area stretching from the Volga to the Urals, 600 to 900 miles beyond Moscow. These have been rapidly developed in the last year and are coming into increasing yield. I suppose the Germans do get Stalingrad and the Caucasian oil fields. Stalin, who is a long-range strategist, will have another surprise for them. It will be a retort in kind for the surprise which we indulged in the hope the Axis might be stalled by an oil famine.

USE CRITICISM

By WILLIAM L. SHIRER

Copyright, 1942, by the New York Tribune, Inc., and Edmonton Bulletin.

One of the most perplexing problems for us in this war in which propaganda is so powerful a weapon arises from the use to which the Axis puts some of our "opposition" leaders and newspapers in furthering its own unscrupulous propaganda.

Hardly a day goes by that Berlin does not broadcast to the four corners of the earth a quotation from some British or American politician or newspaper which appears to back up the very thing Joseph Goebbels says he has been saying right along. Churchill has referred to this state of affairs more than once, and with some bitterness. So has President Roosevelt.

Both leaders believe—as do no doubt the vast majority of their fellow citizens—that their democracies can preserve among their freedoms the right to criticize without it being necessary for a few citizens or newspapers to go out of their way to feed fuel to Hitler's propaganda machine.

Arfi yet, there is a pretty problem there for the two remaining western democracies. And it has to be faced. Hitler doesn't have to face it, and this gives him a certain advantage in the propaganda field. But we do have to face it.

Obviously in this country you cannot ask the citizenry even in war time to suppress all criticism of the government on the ground that Goebbels will over-hear it and use it for his own mean ends. Admittedly that would lead to an absurd state of affairs. It would not help but harm the war effort for we are a people who only do our best when we are constantly jacked up by criticism.

The unmuddling of our sorry war production mess only came after months of hollering on the part of an aroused public. The beginning of the end of the confusion over rubber dawned only after a similarly healthy public reaction. And if Dr. Goebbels occasionally pounced upon an outcry from an enraged senator or editorial writer who cursed the government for confusion over war production or rubber, why then it was too bad we've gained more in setting our house in order than Berlin gained in telling the world what disorder it had been in.

But in other questions it would be idle to deny that some of our critics have played into the hands of Hitler and done us much more harm than good. Above all this is true of those questions dealing with our national unity.

Here, it must be remembered that Hitler, who conquered France largely by splitting her national unity with his clever propaganda, has two strategic propaganda aims. First, to split our national unity by enlarging every fissure disclosed to him; second, to convince our allies, his own people, his conquered peoples and the remaining neutrals that we are so disunited that we can never influence the outcome of the war.

The importance of this second line is not generally realized in this country though I think Berlin is justified in taking it—as it does—very seriously. If Berlin, for example, could convince our main allies, Britain, Russia and China, that the paralysis of disunity was creeping over this nation and that our promised military help would never really be forthcoming in sufficient strength to turn the tide of the war, then the effect on their morale would be tremendous.

MIGHT SEEK PEACE

Conceivably, if Russia and China became convinced that they had to stand alone against one Axis one day decide to save the pieces and negotiate a peace. Conversely, Hitler can maintain the morale of his own people, who in their hearts fear the United States, if he drums into them that this time they have nothing to fear—and he only because we are a disunited nation pursuing the war half-heartedly.

Now, to prove that we are disunited, Hitler and Goebbels have adopted a fine propaganda technique of quoting some of our own newspapers and politicians to that very effect. Three great metropolitan papers in particular, one in Chicago, one in New York, the third in Washington, whose proprietors appear to many to hate Roosevelt more than they hate Hitler, have been of especial value to the Nazi propagandists in the furthering of this technique.

Hardly a day goes by that they are not cited by Goebbels to prove one of his points. If anyone doubts this, let him listen to the broadcasts from Berlin or Rome or even Tokio for a week's running. But they are not the only ones. Eminent members of the United States were enlisted by Goebbels for his scathing attack on the President's Labor Day message to Congress.

It has long been one of the little doktor's main lines of propaganda (just as it is of the above mentioned newspapers) that Roosevelt is seeking to become a dictator in these states. The reaction of a few senators, especially Mr. Taft and Mr. La Follette, to the president's message was not missed or muffled by Berlin. It didn't have to tell the world that Roosevelt was trying to set up a personal dictatorship. Berlin quoted the two senators as saying that.

PROPAGANDA VIEW

Putting all domestic politics aside, since they do not concern this column, but looking at it only from the standpoint of propaganda for or against America's self-interest in war-time, what effect do you think was made on the hundreds of millions of people on our side, on the enemy side and in the neutral lands, by the statement attributed to Senator Taft by the American press that should the president assume the powers he threatened to take to avoid inflation, he, the Senator from Ohio, would not hesitate to advise any man that his patriotic duty was to refuse obedience to any order issued under them?

And yet according to one of the private listening posts in this country who checked thoroughly the Nazi onslaught on the president following his Labor Day message, "Berlin's propaganda line was based exactly on what Taft and La Follette said."

Mr. La Follette was quoted as saying that the president "virtually placed a pistol at congress's head." Berlin appropriated this as its theme song. For example one Nazi broadcast began: "Roosevelt, in his message to congress yesterday, set a pistol at congress's chest, as Senator La Follette put it."

This—there is no use denying it—is grist for the propaganda mill. Berlin does not broadcast to the American people that the two remaining western democracies. And it has to be faced. Hitler doesn't have to face it, and this gives him a certain advantage in the propaganda field. But we do have to face it.

Obviously in this country you cannot ask the citizenry even in war time to suppress all criticism of the government on the ground that Goebbels will over-hear it and use it for his own mean ends. ticipation in the war by America, was the Atlantic Conference between Winston Churchill and Franklin Roosevelt. This was important to the world, but more important to me was the fact that I spent half an hour alone with Roosevelt and two whole days with Churchill. I would rather write of that than of the Atlantic Conference.

That is what I mean by saying that this war is personal as a toothache. Writers and commentators who have been in America during the past two years are much better qualified to write seriously about the war than are those who have been at the scene of the accident.

However, if you want to spend some time with Churchill at his home and listen to him talk and joke over his after-dinner brandy; if you wish to come into the Kremlin and meet Stalin and Molotov and Vyshinsky and Voroshilov; if you wish to watch the greatest brain surgeon in Russia take incredibly large bits of sharpnel from a human skull, almost; if you wish to spend a night in the pubs, in the mess and in the air with the R.A.F. night fighters; if you wish to come behind the scenes and listen to our arguments with censors in a half dozen countries; if you wish to spend one hellish night (if vicariously) watching London bounced on the worst night of her Gethsemane, the night I believed that Britain won the war; if you wish to watch the tank battle in the Western Desert; if you wish to lie in a three-foot-deep trench unbuddering as shells falter over you to drop fifty yards away; if you want to know what it feels like to lie with your nose in the sand and with your toes curled tensely —was good propaganda. If Goebbels had put it that way, the world outside Germany would not have been impressed. But when a prominent American senator put it that way, the effect was different.

Students of the air-waves from Berlin also noted a close parallel between some of Mr. Taft's statements and the wording of the Berlin broadcasts. Mr. Taft said the effect of the proposed presidential powers would be to suspend congress. Berlin said: "Now . . . he thinks the time has come to formally abolish congress." Mr. Taft said it would set a precedent for "an arbitrary one-man dictatorship." Berlin said: "President Roosevelt has launched the main movement of his campaign for dictatorial powers in America . . ." Mr. Taft spoke of an attempt to "override the constitution." Berlin said: "Roosevelt is out to put the people out of power their constitutional democracy . . ."

Now obviously Senators Taft and La Follette are not "tools" of axis propaganda. They are patriotic senators who want to win the war as much as the president or any other American. No one doubts their sincerity in upholding the prerogatives of the congress. They most certainly despise Goebbels and all his works as much as those of us who know him better.

But the use to which Goebbels put their criticism to further axis ends in this grim war for survival emphasizes a problem which this free democracy can hardly afford to ignore unless it is willing to face defeat on the propaganda front. If you don't think that front is important, then of course there is no problem. But we might remember that the German high command, which is no aggregation of fools, has always considered it one of the most important fronts in the war.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE FROM PROPAGANDA FRONT

Angered, and no doubt troubled, by the reaction of world opinion to the daily accounts of Japanese mistreatment of American prisoners, Japan has launched a "counter-campaign against the United States.

Examples from recent Japanese broadcasts: (1) Many Japanese have been killed in recent anti-American mobs. (2) American breaking into the homes of Japanese citizens have pointed their pistols at young Japanese girls and assaulted them before the eyes of their aged and helpless parents. (3) Japanese returning on the exchange ship claim they have learned that a Dr. Honda "was subject to very cruel treatment and finally lost his life in prison . . . on the day of his funeral, Mrs. Honda to her amazement noticed evidence of extreme torture on her husband's features and the sudden shock has driven her to insanity." (4) Thirteen Japanese in "southwestern Los Angeles" were brutally killed, it is said, scarcely big enough for two, forced to live there for "some months" ultimately, some were suffocated to death."

QUOTE PROFESSOR

(5) A former Japanese professor at a California university was quoted as saying: "The United States government has finally called the Japanese to treatment unfit for the worst criminals."

Tokio in an English broadcast to Asia said the American government had "caused" Ambassador Grew to broadcast "distorted news" to discourage sentiment of American internees, adding: "We cannot but condemn the inhumanity of American authorities."

As to the statements of American citizens about their mistreatment at the hands of the Japanese, Tokio, in several broadcasts, dismissed them as "a parcel of lies."

as five airplanes dive-bomb you for nearly an hour; if you wish to drink with us and play with us and argue with us in bars from Fleet Street to Cairo and if, by any incredible chance, you want to know what sort of city a foreign correspondent actually lives in war time —why, come along.

Because that is the tenuous texture out of which this book is made.

Instalment I
No. 10 Downing Street

News in England during the spring of 1941 was as scarce as charity in the heart of a tax collector. Every operational trip that we were allowed to make with the Navy or the R.A.F. had been covered, everyone of importance had been interviewed, and profiles of cabinet officers and generals had long since ceased to interest either our editors or the public.

There was only one story we could not get. None of us had interviewed Winston Churchill. Churchill flatly denied himself to all of us. In vain we begged Brendan Bracken, then his parliamentary secretary, to persuade Churchill to hold semi-monthly press conferences.

"The prime minister is too busy," Brendan told us.

"The president has press conferences twice a week, and he's pretty busy," we countered.

"But the P.M. reports to the House of Commons a couple of times a week," Bracken said wearily. "Any member can ask him any question at any session. You fellows represent the public and, of course, the president sees you in Washington. But members of parliament represent the public here in England, and the P.M. submits to what amounts to interviews by them every time he enters the House."

ALLOWED TO TRAIL KING

It was hard to answer that one. Some months before I had written Bracken said: "President Roosevelt has launched the main movement of his campaign for dictatorial powers in America . . ." Mr. Taft spoke of an attempt to "override the constitution." Berlin said: "Roosevelt is out to put the people out of power their constitutional democracy . . ."

Now obviously Senators Taft and La Follette are not "tools" of axis propaganda. They are patriotic senators who want to win the war as much as the president or any other American. One of them was responsible for this, but I didn't know which. Well, I wouldn't fail for it.

"I really wish that Winston wouldn't phone me so late," I yawned to Chris and Mueller. Then I turned to the popeyed page boy. "Tell 10 Downing Street I'm busy, to get in touch with me tomorrow."

That settled, we went back to our nightly task of rushing the cabinet and arranging the entire future conduct of the war. But the page boy came back more popeyed than ever.

"They are sending a car for you and want you be ready in five minutes" he said.

A CAR WAITING

"Sure, sure, I'll be ready," I said, looking balefully across the room at Larry Rue who appeared much too innocent not to be guilty.

In about five minutes the doorman of the Savoy, stalked into the dining room. This was most unusual. He came to our table and with much respect than he had ever shown to me, "There is a car waiting for you, sir. It is from 10 Downing Street."

"Is it really from 10 Downing Street?"

He smiled and nodded. "Oh, yes, I know the car."

Chris and Mueller sat there openmouthed. I was as impressed as they, and quite as puzzled. It still might be a gag; things had been so dull lately that we spent half our time thinking of practical jokes to play on each other. But still . . .

TAKE THE CALL

"If you boys will take care of the bill," I suggested. "I'll bring you back anything in the way of news I get. And, Chris, in case Beaverbrook or Eden should phone while I'm gone, take the call for me and tell them where I am."

Before Chris could make a fitting answer, I made my exit. But I felt more reassured when I saw the car. It certainly had a 10 Downing Street look about it. I was sure when the driver went straight down the Strand, turned left at Trafalgar Square, entered Whitehall, made a sharp right turn and stopped. We were actually going to 10 Downing Street—Downing Street is a deadend street only one block long. There were two policemen at its entrance where we had stopped.

BEAVERBROOK'S OFFICE

"You're expected," one of them said laconically, and we went on, while I still wondered what it was all about. I rang the bell and, when it opened, gave my name. "Oh, you're expected, come this way," the major-domo of No. 10 said smilingly. For a moment I had the uneasy thought that No. 10 Downing Street was too easy to get into. Then he ushered me into a large office, the office Lord Beaverbrook used in the building. Brendan Bracken was sitting behind the desk and Averell Harriman was sitting near to him.

"We thought you'd like to drink a toast to the new Minister," Harriman said.

"If hell supply the drink," I liked Harriman a lot and saw a great deal of him when he was in London.

"A friend of yours just came in from Washington," Harriman went on. "He said he wanted to see you."

"Who is it?"

At this point I was hit on the back of the head, and turning around, I saw Harry Hopkins. There is no one in the world I'd rather see at any time than Harry Hopkins. Harry is deeply loved by all who know him. When he is in London, he usually works all day and all night. In London he was given the name, "Hurry Upkins."

WEEK-END WITH P.M.

Months later in Russia I heard Molotov and Vyshinsky talk about Hopkins with awe. They'd never seen such a bundle of dynamite in Moscow as Harry. But tonight Harry was tiredly working.

We talked of many things, sitting there with our feet perched comfortably on Beaverbrook's desk and then, finally, I remembered that I was a reporter and that I was wasting time.

"I regret to say our friend Bracken is a rat," I told Averell and Harry.

"We know that, but why?" Harriman asked.

"I asked him for a very simple favor," I explained. "I just want to trail around some day with the P.M. and do a story on him. But will he fix it? No!"

"I don't see any harm in it, Brendan," Harriman said. "If he does a story and I've no good, you can always kill it. How about that trip we're taking on Friday to see them at work? Of course, I don't want to interfere . . ."

"No, I can see that," Bracken said coldly. "Anyhow, I'll see what I can do."

"I'm spending the week-end with the P.M.," Hopkins said, thoughtfully. "Maybe . . ."

"Same old run-around," I said, in disgust. "You'll see what you can do. Listen, I only get paid when I write stories. I haven't found a story in two months, and if I don't find some soon I'll be putting the bite on all three of you."

GRANDEST MAN

"For God's sake, Brendan, dig up some stories for Quent," Hopkins said in my defense, and then we talked of other things. Eventually we started to talk of the grandest man any of us had ever known—Heywood Broun.

Harriman used to bowl a lot with Broun. Broun could bowl a good ball with his left, off-break, couldn't hit a hundred wearing them. After a night's bowling, Broun's usual custom was to have Bracken had met Broun a few times and had liked him as much as we did. It was an sitting there in 10 Downing Street with the president's personal representative, with the Administrator of Lend-Lease and with a cabinet minister talking until dawn about a friend of ours who had been dead nearly two years. But people like Heywood Broun don't die.

Starting Another Season

Dr. and Mrs. Alonzo Stagg spent their 48th wedding anniversary planning the Grand Old Man's 53rd football season. The famous coach's little College of Pacific team opens its schedule today against St. Mary's navy preflight school.

Today's Sport Parade

By Jack Cuddy

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—(BUP)—Latest announcement from the sportswriters' committee regarding the Louis-Conn fight accentuates the part Promoter Mike Jacobs plays in modern pugilism as the "bank-roll guy".

The announcement that both Bomber Joe and Billy-the-Kid would participate in the gate brought the following lists of indebtedness to the fore: (1) Louis owes the 20th Century Club, or Mike Jacobs, $59,505.56; the fact that Louis also owes his co-manager John Roxborough, $41,-148.03 is more or less unimportant. Contender Bill Conn owes Jacobs' 20th Century Club $34,500.

In other words, Louis and Conn owe Promoter Jacobs a total of $94,005—money that Jacobs already has invested as loans to champion and challenger so they could keep up with "the Joneses."

TWO OWE JUST $94,305

UNDER the latest announcement from the committee of writers, both Louis and Conn will be permitted to settle their immediate personal debts out of the gross receipts—which include gate, radio and movies.

Those debts doubtless will be settled but meanwhile, Promoter Jacobs holds the bag for $59,805.56 owed by Louis, and $34,500 owed by Conn. That combination of $94,305 is a lot of money, and guaranteed by the writers committee.

Until the committee guaranteed these obligations, Promoter Jacobs was holding the bag alone—a role he enjoys and a role that has made him the greatest of contemporary fight promoters, perhaps greater even than the late Tex Rickard.

CHAMPIONS SPEND FREELY

THE big difference between the late Rickard and the current Jacobs is this. Jacobs gambles with his O-W-N money, whereas Rickard gambled with the Madison Square Garden Corporation's dough. In the final analysis, the answers are much different.

In view of yesterday's announcement, the immediate question is this: How could Louis—as a sergeant in the army—amass debts of nearly $60,000 to Mike Jacobs and more than $41,000 to co-manager Roxborough?

Well — in the first place—a heavyweight champion lives more freely than any athlete in any other division or branch of sports. Jolting Joe's standard of living would make Joe DiMaggio or Ted Williams of the baseball field look like pikers. Also, Louis bought about $75,000 worth of boxing gloves and other equipment for his negro comrades at Camp Upton and at Ft. Riley, Kas.

HEAVYWEIGHT champion Louis is not broke. He has important investments in Chicago and Detroit properties—but investments that yield him no income. But it must be remembered that in the two preceding years of 1940 and 1941, Bomber Joe hammered out an income of at least one million per year—one-third of which he gave to his co-managers.

But neither Louis nor Conn have earned anything for themselves in 1942. Hence Jacobs still is the bankroll man—just as he has been down through the years —since he entered the promotional field by backing the Barney Ross-Billy Petrolle fight at the Bronx coliseum in 1933—nine years ago.

The bankroll man is all-important in modern boxing because current fighters and managers—with but rare exceptions—live as fast or faster than the money comes in. And between bouts they must have money—money that comes from Uncle Mike, the bankroll guy.

Lucy Hanover Takes Free-for-All

READING, Pa., Sept. 19 (AP)—Lucy Hanover, owned by the Hanover Shoe Farms, Hanover, Pa., and driven by Harry Thomas, won the first two heats and the trophy in the free-for-all trot on the closing day's card of the Reading fair's grand circuit meeting Friday.

Turning a 2:09 heat over the half-mile oval, the brown mare was set back to seventh place in the final brush which went to steward, owned by Joseph H. Burk, Plainfield, N.J., and driven by Paul Vineyard. The time of 2:09 for the second and third test was considered good for the heavy track.

Football Coach For 53 Years

STOCKTON, Calif., Sept. 19 (AP) — Amos Alonzo Stagg, 80-year-old dean of football coaches, adds a chapter today to an already incomparable career, one that bridges the 19th and 20th centuries and, like old man river, just keeps rollin' along.

His College of Pacific team opens the season against the St. Mary's navy preflight school. White haired Mr. Stagg will be fidgeting on the bench in his 53rd successive year as a full-time coach.

Cricketers Plan Play Two Games During Week-end

Saturday will be a real "Anzac" day when a team of Australians and New Zealanders will play each other at cricket. These boys are stationed at the manning pool and are looking forward to a good game of cricket if the weatherman is favorably disposed.

It is reported that there are some excellent cricketers at present in Edmonton and fans are asked to make a special effort to cheer the boys from "down under." Game at the golf links at 2:30 sharp. Refreshments will be taken care of by the Junior C.W.L.

On Sunday a strengthened Penhold team will play an Edmonton team on the golf links ground, play to commence at 12 noon sharp.

Penhold showed excellent form last Sunday against I.T.S. squadrons and will be further bolstered by the inclusion of their fine all-rounder, A. Gibson, who has been playing the last two weeks at Vancouver.

Edmonton team—R. D. Thomson, D. Rowley, W. Croft, E. Diggins, J. King, F. Sleeth, W. Dreyer, A. Davies, J. Edwards, R. Jones, J. Wear. Players are asked to cooperate by bringing refreshments. Umpire, Tel Griffith.

Former Hockey Player Drowns

FLIN FLON, Man., Sept. 19 (CP)—Cliff Workman, 31, who played with the Flin Flon Bombers, senior hockey champions in 1938, was drowned at White Sands, Sask., it was learned here tonight. Working on a construction job, he was taking soundings in the lake when a sudden squall tipped his canoe.

Outdid Babe in Homers

Joe Hauser Still Wields Potent Club

By DWIGHT PELKIN

SHEBOYGAN, Wis., Sept. 19.—Joe Hauser is still hitting home runs at 42. Unser Choe Hauser manufactured more home runs in one season than any man in the long history of baseball, including George Herman Ruth.

He belted 63 in the International League in 1930 and 69 in the American Association in '33.

Nine years have elapsed since Hauser powered those 69 circuit clouts for Minneapolis, but he continues to play first base, scooping low throws and raking in wild heaves that go with Class D baseball and clouting an occasional fence-sitter.

Hauser carries the trimness of the niftiest of the 18 and 20-year-old youngsters he guides as manager of the Sheboygan club. His knees are patched and scarred from operations that doomed his major league career and finally ended his brilliant run in Double A. His hair is just a little thin on top, but he has the hustle, strength and stamina of a well-conditioned recruit.

Hauser was a rookie 'way back in '18, when another war stalked sports.

BOTH KNEES SNAP UNDER JOE HAUSER

Although it shall never know the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, his name undoubtedly will survive those of many big leaguers. He'll always have a sort of special niche in baseball.

It was not been for a tragic knee injury, the name of Joe Hauser might now be of the same stature as that of Babe Ruth.

A split right kneecap stopped Hauser in '25 as he was about to start his fourth season with the Philadelphia Athletics. Surgeons strung together the broken bones with silver wire. Young Hauser was out for the campaign, after his 27 home runs the year before were second only to Bambino Ruth's 49.

Hauser tried again in '26, but the leg lacked the strength to brace him at the plate. The season was a dismal one. It was to the minors then for Joe Hauser.

Something snapped in Hauser's left leg while he was with Minneapolis in May of '34. They patched him up again, but before July was ripped from the calendar he was in the hospital with a broken left knee and fractured wrist.

tract from his bucks office magnetism. He looks ferocious to fans when he turns on an umpire, but to friends and folks who know him he's just a colorful old warhorse who loves the game and wouldn't know what to do without it.

With his attractive wife, who rarely misses a home game with her scorecard, Hauser makes his home in Sheboygan, where he has a sporting goods store.

Last year Hauser piloted his Indians to the Wisconsin State League play-off championship when Green Bay, home of the mighty professional football Packers, forfeited the series after winning the season title. This year Hauser's team again waged a one-two battle with Green-Bay. Hauser was selected as manager of the league All-Stars in July, and they walloped the leading Bluejays, 11-3.

Hauser belted 11 home runs in 1941, made almost half of his 67 hits good for extra bases, hit .288 in 77 engagements. He had nine home runs in 30 skirmishes this trip, and batted in the 300s.

Unser Choe Hauser would be a super-testimonial for Toast Crunchies or Wheat Pops.

St. Louis Fans Scramble To Secure Seats for Series

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 19.—(AP)—A quick sellout of reserved seats for the St. Louis end of the world series was predicted last night as the Cardinals' office was swamped with mail orders.

More than 12,500 applications for tickets have poured in during the last two days. Sales are limited to two tickets to a person.

Counting several thousand extra seats around the playing field the capacity of Sportsman's Park will be increased to near 40,000. All the box seats are sold.

Officials regarded the heavy early rush as an indication the demand for seats would be greater than in 1934, when the last world series was played here.

But the "pennant fever" is not expected to break out in full force until after the Cardinals actually clinch the pennant. They return home Sunday night for the final six games of the season.

Clubmen Run Up 14 Points In 2nd Quarter

Showing a vast improvement in both striking and defensive power, particularly in the first half, Edmonton Athletic Club trounced Maple Leafs 15-5 at Clarke Stadium on Friday night in the third game on the Edmonton Junior Rugby League schedule.

All three teams are now on even footing in the matter of points, each having a pair, but the No. 3 "M" Depot boys won their only start. E.A.C. dropped the league opener to the Leafs, who have since lost two in succession.

Results were apparent last night from stiff workouts that the Clubmen have been undergoing for the past 10 days under their coach, Paul Kirk, who has been receiving valuable assistance from Percy Daigle, formerly of the Winnipeg Bombers, and Sgt. Bill Starr, of the famous Green Bay Packers.

The E.A.Cees were running their plays better and had a more varied assortment to throw at the 1941 Alberta junior champions. The line was holding well and Gordon Rayner's inclusion was a big asset. The big fellow who was one of the outstanding stars last year as a member of the South Side Spitfires broke through time after time to smear Leafs in their tracks before they got organized.

On the other hand, the Leafs really never got rolling until the last few minutes. By the first half they just couldn't get going, but as usual they started to come fast in the last quarter after picking up a touchdown with a minute to go in the third.

With just a minute to go, Danylowich threw a pass to Dez good for 20 yards and Klesko followed with another to Lawrence, also completed, but they delayed too long. These were the only completed forwards made during the game.

There was no scoring in the first quarter as Smitten and Jack Ingram did some good ball carrying for the E.A.C. who made three first downs to two for the Leafs. Flett's and Lawrence's tackling was very effective and Danylowich was getting good distance from his kicks.

A bad snap paved the way for the E.A.C.'s first two points, Klesko being downed for a safety touch. Smitten kicked over a minute later but Hornesty ran the ball out.

About half way through the quarter Smitten and Bill Ingram completed a fine play, the latter going over for a touch to make the score 7-0 and Smitten kicked the convert.

For the second E.A.C. touchdown Bill Ingram, Causegrove and Smitten pieced out the necessary yards on successive plays. Smitten again converted.

Just before the end of the period Danylowich hoisted a high one over the Smitten line, but Teodor, who did some swell work that night, ran the ball out, brushing off several tacklers.

A well-timed placement early in the third quarter gave the E.A.C. another point to make the score 15-0.

Just before the change over, the Leafs worked the ball down to their opponents' 28-yard line and Russ Klesko drove through for a touchdown. Danylowich missed the convert.

Each club intercepted an opposition pass, Blue grabbing a Leaf toss and Sutherland looked to have a touch in the making when he intercepted an E.A.C. forward in the last quarter, but he hesitated and was downed after running 40 yards.

Boston Started July 14

Current Rush of Cardinals Not Unlike Braves 1914 Dash

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The strangest pennant race of all time was in 1914 when Boston Braves paraded from last in July to first and undying fame in a few weeks—but St. Louis Cardinals will have accomplished a feat in some respects more difficult if they come home in front next week.

Everybody remembers that the Braves were last in mid-July that year and that they spurted to the top. Most people have forgotten the details.

Actually it was one of the tightest races from top to bottom in major league history and even though the Braves were in last place on July 18, when they started to roll, they were only 11½ games from the lead.

[illegible] royal with every club trampling on every other club and Boston made its climb to the top by winning 35 games and losing 10 between July 18 and Sept. 8.

STARTED AUG. 5

This year the Cardinals were 10 games off the pace as late as Aug. 5, even though they were in second place. And when they made their move they delivered the most punishing blows themselves with a minimum of help from the other clubs.

Between Aug. 5 and Sept. 13, when they took over first place exclusively, the Cardinals captured 33 games and lost eight. They have won four more without an interruption since then and have earned themselves a lead of three full games.

To make their achievement complete, of course, they must keep on until they win the pennant. They have eight more games to play—two today and tomorrow at Chicago and two each at home next week against the Cubs, Pittsburgh Pirates and Cincinnati Reds.

TOUGH FOR DODGERS

If the Redbirds win seven out of these eight, which is not too much to expect from the spirited St. Louis kids, they can clinch the pennant no matter whether the Dodgers win all their remaining 10.

And inasmuch as the Dodgers have shown no signs of being able to win 10 straight—even though seven are with the Phils, two with Boston Braves and one with New York Giants—the Cardinals may find it necessary to nail only five or six.

Both teams were idle yesterday—the Cardinals having a day off and the Dodgers run into inclement weather for the first installment of their series with the Phils.

Today St. Louis plans to send Mort Cooper against his former teammate, Lon Warneke, and the latter's boss Curt Davis opposite Rube Melton. The postponed game will be played Monday on what was to have been an open date.

Army, Navy Pats Defeat Mannville By Score of 5-4

Army and Navy Pats defeated the visiting Mannville Bluebirds 5-4 in last night's softball game at Kingsway Park.

Mannville scored in the third inning, but the Pats bunched three hits in the fifth, which along with an error added to three runs.

Blanche Tiviotdale started the rally with a line drive to deep centre and Connie Strachan was safe on an error. Gwen Lawson and Beryl Westbrook both singled.

After counting one in the seventh, Mannville came back for two more in the eighth, the last inning played and had the bases full when the side was retired.

Football Gets Prep Test Today In United States

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—A wartime football season will get its pre-flight test today in the United States.

In another week the campaign will be in full flight, but today's program of a dozen "major" games is merely a preliminary to the main event, marked by appearances of the service teams that have stirred up a great deal of preliminary talk.

The rosters of these service teams look like a coach's happiest dream, but until they have played a few games there's no telling whether they will be as great as the number of famous players on their squads indicate.

Today's standout game likely will be the all-college clash between Kentucky and Georgia, southeastern conference rivals. Georgia, with Frankie Singwich back again supported by Charley Trippi, Lamar Davis and an experienced cast, is one of the conference favorites.

The Axis overran 1,060,377 square miles of territory in Europe in the first three years of the war.

Bill Cunningham's Column

EN ROUTE TO BOSTON — By a little fast leap-frogging, and a colonel's lucky plane cancellation, I managed to catch up with Sergeant Joe Louis, blue barracks bag and all, as he departed Fort Riley to train for his bout with Private Billy Conn in New York on the afternoon of Columbus Dal. As usual the newly made sergeant didn't have much to say except "Hello," "Howayuh" and "Yeah, Evvathing is swell."

A clam could give this particular soldier lessons in oratory. He's free, easy and friendly, but part of his equipment isn't a self-starting vocabulary. He likes for you to say something and then he agrees with you.

He knew nothing about any plans for the fight, he said, but he's mighty glad to get a chance to participate in it for Army relief. He guesses that Mike Jacobs, his managers and "the guvvument" fixed it up, and the fact that he's not going to get any money out of it is all right with him.

"We all ought to do what we can," he said, "an 'it's sumpun Ah can do."

EXPECTS TO GET CONN

Asked if he felt he could do it again, he inquired to what again? And when it was explained that his interrogator meant knock Conn out again, he said he felt he could, but that he hoped it didn't "go as long as last time."

Last time, it went into the 15th round, with Conn dancing and dabbing and scoring a formidable pyramid of points through the first dozen. Then the Pittsburgh toughie got a flash of an altar boy, let ambition sabotage discretion, and decided he'd run Louis so hard that his batteries were dead. Suddenly, he switched from reverse to forward speed and roared in to bash the slower Negro down.

They brought him to in the dressing room. He was a destroyer trying to blast a bridgehead against cross channel guns. When he quit circling and came into range, the Louis artillery literally obliterated him.

"AT AIN' NO LOAFIN' LIFE"

Asked why he couldn't do more with Conn in those 12 preceding stanzas, Joe scratched his nose, looked out the train window where the tall corn and the taller sunflowers were nodding in the breeze and said, "He's a good boy. He's hard to get at."

That would be the world champion, who never has flown an alibi, and never yet has failed to praise the other fellow, even when there was nothing to praise. He didn't say he was worn to a frazzle with constant training and fighting in that humid-the-much routine that had him on at the time. He didn't say that all his mind wasn't on fighting at that time because somebody had stirred up courthouse trouble between his wife and himself.

He simply praised Conn and let it go at that.

"Ah can get in shape," he said in answer to a question, and he looked it. Closing his big lemon-yellow fists and looking at them he continued, "Ah'm not moahn ten or fifteen poun's nuvweight. 'Ats about the way Ah always am, stayin' trainin'. Ah'm pretty hahd, as it is. They keeps yuh busy in the ahmy. 'At ain' no loafin' life," and he chuckled a little, "it ain' aroun' no cavalry stables anyhow."

EVERYTHING BUT SPURS

To tell the honest truth, the man looks superb. Joe is really a magnificent looking soldier, and a very flashy one sartorially along with it. What soldiers wear is, of course, prescribed by regulations, but there are certain extra trimmings that go with certain branches of the service. The cavalry is one.

There, because a man, at least theoretically rides horses, even if he's only a troop clerk, he's entitled to a chin strap with which to hold his hat on. He's entitled to leather puttees. He even can sport spurs. Joe wears it all but the spurs. His old-fashioned campaign hat with the bright yellow cord he wears at a rakish tilt with the strap under his chin. The puttees are shined like the seat of a motorman's blue serge pants. His shoes gleam, too.

Efforts to get deathless prose out of him about the army are no more successful than efforts to get deathless prose out of him about anything always have been. He said it was "fine." He "liked it great." Fort Riley was "swell."

JACOBS GUEST CONDUCTOR

Joe is very proud of his new chevrons and he said as much. He obviously feels they weren't a gift, that he worked for them and earned them.

It looks, incidentally, as if Ive got a little taking back to do in connection with the announcement of this particular contest. A little, but not too much—not more than half. I had it straight from high in the army that a Mike Jacobs promoted Louis-Conn fight was not looked upon with favor, which meant it wouldn't be held. So I've said it wouldn't be held, at each and every opportunity.

That's still true, and it isn't. The men will fight, and Uncle Mike will handle the details, so, to that extent, my claims to superior knowledge have now been blown to flinders. The bulk of the pot going straight to Army relief, it being a straight army promotion with Uncle Mike, as guest conductor, I'm still right so far as "no Louis-Conn fight" goes.

LOUIS TO BE FIT

The kind under discussion back there was one in which the gladiators and Brother Jacobs would carve the golden residue. The plea was that Louis had the shorts on his next income tax installment and now an adjustment in that regard has been made.

I couldn't see that he had the shorts anywhere. He's tall and broad and beautiful in that snazzy uniform. That extra weight he mentions seems to be around his torso, not so much in his stomach, as around his chest and under his arms. But he looks as if he would peel off easily with a few training sessions, and that he'd harden easily with a few days on the road.

I noticed that he didn't smoke. He didn't even have any cigarettes, but he did work for awhile on a piece of chewing gum. He looks like an even better Louis to me.

Mr. Conn is welcome to this one. I wouldn't want it.

By JUDSON BAILEY

BROOKLYN, Sept. 19. — (AP)—Things haven't been bad enough for Brooklyn Dodgers, so Friday the weatherman prevented them from sitting down to what they had hoped would be a soft touch against Philadelphia Phils.

The Dodgers are haunted by the spectre of the 1930 campaign when they had a chance to capture the pennant and instead finished fourth while these same Cardinals went into the world series.

That year Brooklyn led the National League longer than any other club, was out in front in mid-August and was second two weeks before the season closed. But St. Louis swept into Ebbets Field and captured a three-game series. It was the beginning of the end and the Dodgers skidded out of the pennant fight.

The Dodgers are mathematically secure from ending lower than second this year, but their collapse has been just as complete with six defeats in their last seven games. Only the fact that they are billeted with the Phils for most of the remaining days in the season keeps their hope alive.

Of Brooklyn's 10 final games, seven are with the eighth-place Phils whom the Dodgers have overpowered 12 out of 15 times without any apparent need for pressure. Two others are with the weak Boston Braves and one with New York Giants, and the Dodgers need to win all of them.

But they won't if they are unable to perform an immediate about face. Manager Leo Durocher apparently was not too sure, because he refused to take Friday's postponed game and make a doubleheader with the Phils today. Instead there will be a single game Saturday, a previously scheduled double bill Sunday and the postponed game on Monday, which was to have been an open date.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19—(AP) —Lon Warneke, the ol' Arkansas hummingbird, will be on the firing line against his old teammates, the fiercely-battling St. Louis Cardinals, in the first game of the important two-game Cub-Card series opening at Wrigley Field today.

Opposing him will be Morton Cooper, who will be seeking his 21st triumph to keep the Red Birds in the lead for the National league pennant.

Warneke, who was returned to Chicago on waivers by the Cardinals in mid-summer, declared he bears no malice toward the St. Louis crew, but that he was going to bear down to the very limit.

"You're damned right," he exclaimed. "I'm going to try there to win this one for myself, if I can. I'll be out there to keep the wolf from my own door."

Manager Jimmy Wilson, of the Cubs, revealed that Warneke asked to pitch.

"I told him to go ahead," Wilson commented. "You know it was Lon who started the Dodgers on their nose-dive a few days ago. Now maybe he can help Brooklyn out a bit."

Cooper, a horse for work for the Cardinals, was manager Billy Southworth's choice for the opener with Max Lanier going for the Cardinals Sunday.

The Cardinals, victorious in 24 of their last 40 games, roared into Chicago last night with Pitchers Cooper and Lanier primed for the kill. Three weeks ago the Red Birds were 7½ games out of the lead. Today they're in front by three games with eight to go.

By CHARLES JOHNSON

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 19.—To the average baseball fan, the name of Michael J. Kelley probably doesn't mean much.

Kelley, a congenial 47-year-old Irishman known as "Kel" throughout baseball, is president and sole owner of the Minneapolis baseball club of the American Association. He has been a player (first baseman), manager and owner during his 47 years in the game.

Kel is baseball's master salesman and trader.

It was Kel who took Van Lingle Mungo, a discarded Brooklyn Dodger, and brought him back so far the New York Giants parted with some real cash to get him back into the National League. It was Kel who picked up Huck Geary from the Class D De Land, Fla., club three years ago and recently peddled him to the Pittsburgh Pirates for a nifty bit of cash and two players.

SMART PLAYER DEALS

Such deals have been typical ever since Kelley became owner of the Millers in 1924. He stepped into a bad ball club that year—financially as well as artistically. He was working on borrowed money.

Yet, before mid-season, he had sold Leo Mangum, a pitcher who never burned up the big leagues, and Johnny Grabowski, a catcher who eventually wound up with the Yankees, to the Chicago White Sox. He received $40,000 and two players.

Probably the finest bit of baseball business Mike ever pulled was with Brooklyn in 1936. He sold the Dodgers (they were Daffiness Boys then) third baseman Johnny Butler. In return, Minneapolis got six players. He eventually sold three of them back to the majors for fancy prices.

Kel specializes in getting players who have had a fling in the big time and failed. He does something to them that makes for startling comebacks.

CRITZ A KELLEY PRODUCT

Some of the best prospects Minneapolis has had in the last 18 years have been the hardest to sell. Pat Malone was one. His habits weren't too good in the minors, and when Mike finally straightened him out it took a lot of persuading (Mike is one of the best) to get the Chicago Cubs to take him on.

Hughey Critz is a Kelley product. Mike didn't like his looks and thought he was putting something over on Cincinnati when he sold him for the ordinary price. You know how Hughey turned out.

In 1936, he dickered for and purchased Dusty Cooke, Carl Reynolds and Red Kress. All were former major leaguers. They played so brilliantly, Mike sold them back to the majors at a handsome profit.

Don't take our word for it. Look at the record, as Al Smith would say. It will show that Mike holds the master salesman of the minor leagues these many years.

Not bad for a fellow who has been in the business 47 years and whose father once told him to get into "something permanent."

Better Bring O'Connor Here

TORONTO, Sept. 19 (CP)—There isn't enough track talent in the Royal Canadian Air Force's No. 1 training command to give Larry O'Connor a race on his own terms, so the airmen have set their own: a 100-yard dash in which O'Connor will go over low hurdles while his opponents run on the flat at No. 1 training command's track and field championships at Toronto Varsity stadium.

Sports . . . . Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Instead of fining those unruly spectators, maybe Brooklyn should give 'em a vote of thanks. . . . Looks as if the Phils are the real beneficiaries of the close race. They drew 26,874 for the Cards series and will cut in on five games at Ebbets' field, including a Sunday double-header, as well as two home games against Brooklyn. . . . Ordinarily at this stage they'd have about 300 fans rattling around in the park.

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE

Washington Redskins have a club rule that players who eat in railroad diners have to leave a 25-cent tip each time—which makes them popular with waiters who have fed big league baseballers . . . Although the Seattle City Hockey League has lost a dozen men to the armed forces, plans call for a three-club league this winter—unless the big pro leagues send out too many calls for veterans like Roger Jenkins, Frank Daley and Dave Downie.

One thing that has hoss-race fans puzzled about the Whirlaway-Alsab match race today is who's going to be pace setter? . . . Both these goats—beg pardon, equine aristocrats—like to come from behind to win and unless one jockey is willing to take a chance on getting a licking by setting the pace, the affair is liable to be about as exciting as that great mile race a few years back when Cunningham, Venzke and Mangan did everything but run backwards to keep from taking the lead. . . . To dress up the race a bit they're calling it the "Narragansett Championship" and instead of having numbers, the starting stalls will have signs. "Whirlaway" and "Alsab" over them. . . .

Mrs. Warren Wright, who names all the Calumet farm horses, has pointed out to save up "Whirl" names until Whirlaway becomes a pappy. . . . At the suggestion of Hugh Fullerton, the AP equine expert, she has named Whirly's sparkling sister "Whirlette". . . . Now Freddie is moaning, "the gal better be good. I'll have to have two bucks down every time she starts."

. . . Detroit Tigers' pitchers have challenged the rest of the squad to a ball game and they claim they'll win if they can have centrefielder Doc Cramer to do their catching.

Columbus Takes First of Playoffs

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 19 (AP)—Columbus Red Birds defeated Toledo Mud Hens 9-0 here last night in the opening game of the final American association Governor's cup playoffs series as Bill Crouch turned in his best pitching performance of the season before 3505 spectators.

While Crouch was limiting the Mud Hens to four hits, three made by Lin Storti, the Red Birds battered John Marcum to all corners of the lot.

Phils May Give Works to Bums Today for Rebuff

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19—(AP) —That feud between the cellar-dwelling Phils and the almost-mighty Dodgers is cropping up again—and don't be surprised if the lowly fellows blast the bums' last glimmering hopes for the National league pennant in Brooklyn today.

They're not talking about it publicly, but it's common knowledge here that Manager Hans Lobert's much-smeared losers still are rankled by the "slight," as they called it, which they suffered at the hands of Larry MacPhail last spring.

MacPhail called off a Phils-Dodgers exhibition game, presumably because the Phils mightn't bring in much cash. The Phils had their day, later, of course, when Lobert refused to let the bums on his spring training diamond for another exhibition fray.

Whirlaway Draws Post Position for Race With Alsab

PAWTUCKET, R.I., Sept. 19 (AP) —Whirlaway will go from the inside and Alsab from the outside game today when those outstanding stars of the United States turf are sent off in their winner-take-all match race for a $25,000 purse over Narragansett park's mile and three-sixteenths course under scale weights.

Those post positions were drawn Friday by President James E. Dooley, who suggested the duel last Saturday when Alsab was withdrawn from the Narragansett special, won handily by Whirly.

Carrying 126 pounds, the four-year-old Whirly will be ridden by "Iceman" Georgie Woolf, who piloted him when he set a new money-winning record in the Massachusetts handicap and again here last week when he boosted his total earnings to $491,336.

Col. Albert Sabath has selected Jockey Carroll Bierman to complete the 115-pound load Alsab will be called upon to carry.

Farmers: Fish For Freedom

Farm-grown fish—a new crop that presents no harvest-labor problem—are helping American farmers to provide more Food for Freedom.

By flooding waste acres of gullied or exhausted land, farmers are able to produce a finny harvest of good, high-protein food while the soil is recovering fertility. Even natural lakes or ponds on farms are now being stocked with fish in order to realize the maximum in food production from every acre.

The one realization that good food can be grown in the water, as well as the soil, farmers are fertilizing their ponds, planting fish, and putting their families happily to work harvesting a tasty crop.

Besides adding to the family's diet and food supply, the farm pond provides a fishing relaxation, a handy swimming hole, and boating pleasure. Often, too, it will attract wild fowl and provide food to be brought down (in law-abiding quantity) by the shotgun.

With the aid of Uncle Sam, fish are stocked in farm ponds and kept well fed by a simple means of fertilizing the water. Little other care is needed—and bass, crappie, bream, perch and other "lake" type fish grow rapidly and soon offer sport and food. A one-acre farm pond provides enough fishing for a good-sized family and some of the neighbors, too.

Farmers who have not taken advantage of their water reservoirs of food are being urged to do so by the United States department of agriculture, which will provide them with all necessary data to make fish-farming a success.

Hitting the Trail

The annual meeting of the provincial Tuxis boys' work board was held, Sept. 12, at Gaetz Memorial Church, Red Deer.

Harold Crackerley was chairman and extended an official welcome to the new Tuxis secretary, the Rev. Gray Rivers.

It was recommended that in the future when referring to the boys' work in the province, the name of Tuxis would include all age groups. The nine to twelve-year group will be known as Explorers, the twelve to fifteen-year group as Trail Rangers, and boys above that age as Tuxis. It is expected that this procedure will simplify publicity of the movement.

Any group desiring to sell Christmas cards this year is asked to make application immediately because of the possibility of rationing. There are now 12,000 boxes available for the province. Groups will be given the same number they received last year, and may obtain more if any remain on hand.

Another recommendation urged by the board is that every group shall wear, in part at least, the official uniform of the Tuxis. Suggested for wear is the official grey shirt, tie and beret.

It was decided to hold Boys' Parliament this year. Mr. Rivers will organize and supervise the session. Mr. Frazackerlay was appointed chairman for the coming year.

Those attending the meeting were: Art West, Art Harris, Will Shearer, Cyril Brethour, Joe Mather, Fit-Lit R. Ross, the Rev. Gray Rivers, all of Calgary; the Rev. Bicker, Bentley; Harold Frazackerley, W. T. Bowrey, William Pettigrew, Harold Sprague, and the Rev. J. A. Perrie of Edmonton; the Rev. Andy Wood and the Rev. Wilkinson, Red Deer.

The rally held last Saturday by Calvin and Erskine United Church boys' groups was the first of its kind to be held by the two churches.

Nearly 50 boys attended the program of baseball, races, treasure hunts and paper chase. The outing ended with a wiener roast and three hearty cheers.

One of the fundamental aims of the meet was the promotion of greater co-operation between churches and groups.

The Erskine Crusaders, Tuxis group of that church, will conduct the evening services at Erskine Un. Red on Oct. 4. The services will be held at the regular hour, and guest speaker will be William Pettigrew, chairman of the Edmonton boys' work board.

It is hoped that groups from other parts of the city will be able to attend.

The Edmonton and district boys' work board held its first fall meeting at the Y.M.C.A. Monday evening, with Chairman W. H. Pettigrew presiding.

The Rev. J. A. Perrie reported on the provincial meeting held last week at Red Deer. He was board delegate to the senior body.

The board was commended on its co-operation in the city survey conducted by the Social Agencies group work committee for juvenile delinquency.

The need for a mentors' club to train new leaders and the organization of such a group was discussed. Russell Hamilton, leader of one of the city's trail groups, was elected chairman of the mentor's club for the year.

Harold W. Sprague, publicity chairman, reported on plans for the coming year, and mentors in all church groups are now responsible for sending news to him.

The board has been compelled to survey the city to learn the extent of work in various churches and committee hopes to assist in establishing Tuxis and Trail Ranger groups, and is prepared to give training to prospective leaders.

Activities of the camp committee were described by Tom Buchanan. The district camp was held at Moonlight Bay under the direction of the Rev. Gray Rivers, provincial secretary. Mr. Buchanan was business manager.

The resignations of Crauford Gray, camp committee chairman, and Mr. Buchanan were accepted, and prayer was offered by the R.C.A.F.

Clark Ready, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., spoke briefly to the board, stating that while the groups had lost leaders, there was available for training and responsibility other men who would be found adequate, and who would answer the call for leadership.

The new secretary of the Edmonton board, Neil German, was introduced, and it was announced that meetings of the board will be held on the second Monday of each month at the Y.M.C.A.

The Trail Ranger city council will begin meetings in October, and Hart Cantelon, sponsor, plans an outing for the groups at which to elect council delegates and have them present at this meeting.

The provincial secretary, the Rev. Gray Rivers, will be in the city to work with the boys' work board in fall promotion work and organization of new groups and areas. It is planned to have this extension work lead up to a city-wide Tuxis Sunday, October 4, when all churches will participate by having Tuxis services or speakers.

Hi-School Hi-Lights

By JAN PARKER

Extra-curricular activities, you may have discovered, are a lot like the classics—you would like to really dig in, but there just isn't time for more than a sample.

It is true that if we tried to participate in every organization our schools have to offer, there wouldn't be much academic work, but we do need that sample.

What we should realize is that extra-curriculars are planned for a purpose—they aren't included to provide fun alone, although of course, that is one motive.

Athletics, debate teams, drama groups, school publications, Hi-Y, the language clubs—they all play an important part in modern education, an education for well-rounded persons, and one applicable to our later every-day life.

"But I am never going to go on the stage," one girl wails. "Besides, I would be scared to death if I tried to act." If it frightens you, sign up for it!

Let's take stock of ourselves. If it is poise we lack, we will try drama or debate. If it is sportsmanship and tolerence that we could use a little more of, we find athletics, and if we realize that we are coming up short with intiative, the answer is school publication work.

None of us have complete personalities, and it is to fill these needs that extra-curriculars are provided. Besides, they are fun!

VICTORIA HIGH SCHOOL
By Jack Towers

Student activities at Vic are in full swing now—and swing it will be at the "Lit" program and dance next Friday night. The Hi-Y and Students' Union are sponsoring this lit in honor of boys from this school who are now in the armed forces.

PO. Pete Oleniek, D.F.C., and his mother will be the guests of honor. PO. Oleniek was the first Vic-ite to join up and is now home on leave after having flown bombers over Germany on thirty-four different occasions.

The Badminton club is now organized with Zola Tanner as president, Bill Haynes, vice-president, and Lorna Brown, secretary. Games are held in the gym every Friday at noon.

The bowling club was also organized this week. Frances Stanley is president and Jean Ratcliffe, vice-president.

Outdoor activities were held up this week, but in spite of this fact, several good field and track practices took place. Monday, the boys were coached in pole-vaulting by an American service man. The Junior and Bantam rugby teams show exceptional progress.

Hyman Robin brought high academic honors to Vic when he won a Robert Tegler scholarship (three years' tuition at the University). There are two Tegler scholarships awarded each year to students who obtain highest marks in the Grade XII departmental examinations. Hymie's average was 90.85%. Vic congratulates and wishes luck to her brilliant ex-student.

UNIVERSITY HIGH SCHOOL
By Jane Becker

The election of members for the University High Students' Union was held on Thursday, to the great relief of the staff, who are hoping to save the major part of the blackboards for their own use, from now on.

Definite plans for the formation of a student council were started at a meeting last Friday, and since then the school has been in an uproar. All candidates who were nominated gave speeches, some of which greatly amused their audience.

Mr. Tanner as staff representative and Mr. Roxborough as honorary president were elected by acclamation. The following is the list of officers elected for the Students' Union: president, Bob Judge; secretary, Jane Becker; treasurer, John Gordon; social convener, Eileen Hustler; program convener, Gordon Wyatt.

TECHNICAL HIGH SCHOOL
By Allison Burkholder

With the students of Tech. settled down for a new term their thoughts have turned to the elections for the students' Union for the school year 1942-43.

Candidates for officers are: President, Helga Allman and Bruce McCourtney; vice-president, Doug McKenzie, Bill Zukkswich and Stewart Thomas; secretary, Fern Thompson and Rose Voros.

WESTGLEN HIGH SCHOOL
By Ron Fitch

At the conclusion of the third week of school, Westglen activities are now in full swing.

The retiring Students' Council held a meeting Monday and it was decided that the election of new representatives and executives will take place the first Wednesday of October. Until then, when the new president will be elected, Tom Campbell will act in that position.

The boxing and wrestling club, under the direction of R. V. Clarke, met on Thursday to make plans for the coming year. It is hoped that many students will take part in this club's activities, and a very successful year is anticipated.

It has been announced that Tony Thorne, a grade XII student of last year, had been awarded a Tegler scholarship entitling him to three years tuition at the University of Alberta. Tony, who was given a Westglen academic pin last year, plans to enter varsity this fall to study chemistry.

At the same time it was learned that Dorothy Coggles, another of last year's students had also been awarded a one hundred dollar scholarship. Westglen is proud of both of them.

Organized Groups Are Important To Welfare of Young People

The benefits of boys' groups are numerous, and parents who are interested in the welfare of their children, should make certain that they become actively engaged in some organized activity this winter, is the opinion of Philip J. Brown, leader of St. Faith's Rangers.

"The growing problem of juvenile delinquency has been brought to the fore recently with the return of the evacuated young people," said Mr. Brown. "Evidence of the lack of organized groups for youth is shown in the number who roam the streets daily with nothing to do and no place to go."

At a recent meeting of leaders, this problem was discussed. Lack of facilities, and a shortage of leaders due to the war, seem to be chief reasons for the few clubs now in operation in Edmonton for younger citizens.

HIS BELIEF

According to Mr. Brown, it is in the best interests of the community that the civic officials should take a hand in overcoming this problem. He believes that Edmonton should follow the lead of other Canadian cities and provide free recreational centres for young people.

"Establishment of boys' clubs in every church where there is available accommodation, and the community building of all available community halls for this purpose would greatly relieve the situation," he urged.

He said that now, more than ever before, the problem of leadership is a critical one. Demands of war have removed many without leaders. Encouraging of high school and university students to accept such positions would help.

ADVANTAGES

But in any case, the advantages gained through group activities far outweigh any inconveniences. Parents should prevent their children from belonging to organized groups in their district. Too few parents appreciate the great deal of time and energy spent on leadership, and lack of their support is often the reason for leaders leaving their groups. In failing to cooperate with mentors, they open the way for their own son's or daughter's delinquency.

"With a war on, and with added difficulties in the home, parents should be thankful of the splendid opportunities their sons and daughters are getting during these critical times. What is more—they should bend every effort into seeing to it that their children are occupied in some worthwhile organization, getting a fair share of the pleasure that they need," he said.

Sunday School Class Gets Letter

A letter from children of the Edmonton Central Mission in London, England, will be read at the Bissell Memorial Sunday school session on Sunday morning.

Several months ago, the Explorer group of Bissell Memorial, under the leadership of Miss M. George, sent through Rev. J. T. Steele, pens, a package of handkerchiefs to these English children.

This week the following communication came to the superintendent here:

"Dear Mr. Stephens:

We, the officers and teachers of Edmonton Central Hall Mission of the Methodish church, wish to thank you for the very thoughtful gifts and kind wishes you have sent us.

We are glad to write that our Sunday school is getting back to a normal condition, and we are looking forward to the days of peace which we hope will come soon.

We send our love to the boys and girls of Edmonton, Alberta, and pray that your work may continue to prosper. With best love and kindest wishes, and hands across the sea."

The letter was signed by the pastor and officers of the mission, and with it came a letter from all who were recipients of the gifts.

CARRY IT OFF

How about making a handy beach bag for your bathing suit and flyings? Take an ordinary turkish towel and sew up the sides. Make a one-inch hem at each end and run a narrow but strong stick through each hem. That's all there is to it, but it makes a most handy gadget.—Camille Grande, Dover, N.J. Or would you rather just make a plain pocketbook? Take a straw, oblong table mat and fold it not quite in half, leaving enough to fold over for a flap. Sew it up the sides with bright colored yarn and sew a snap on the flap to fasten the purse. You can also dress it up with your name or initials embroidered across the top.—Beverly Bonelli, Huntington Park, Calif.

One-Man Stirrup Pump is Valuable

The newest equipment to fight fire and incendiary bombs is a stirrup pump made completely of non-critical material, which can be operated easily by one person. The pump itself is wood. The washers are leather, and the hose is made of a new plastic tubing. The pump is a neat looking contraption and functions quickly.

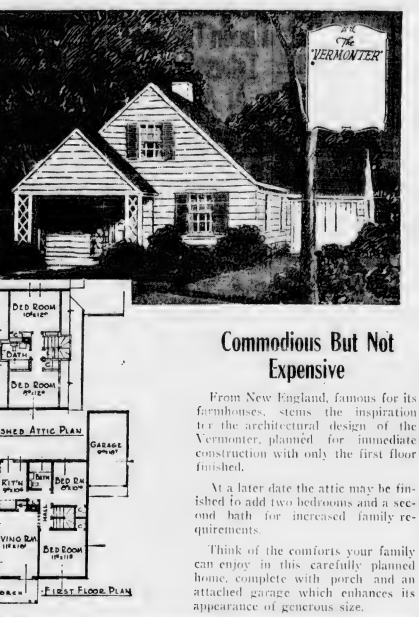

The pump should be kept near a pail of water, always ready for action. Just place it in the water when using. Rest the center vertical bar against the body, so one hand will be free to work the cross bar up and down, while the other directs the water.

The pump, while designed primarily for incendiary-bomb fires, also can be used against Japanese beetles with insecticides. It's a good substitute, too, for the common garden hose.

The pump costs less than $5 and is a permanent investment, for it contains no materials that will deteriorate or rust.

A survey has shown that 14,000,000 of the 16,500,000 inhabitants of Mexico are either full-blooded Indians or have part Indian blood.

RE-MODEL — REPAIR AND — RE-BUILD

Commodious But Not Expensive

From New England, famous for its farmhouses, stems the inspiration for the architectural design of the Vermonter, planned for immediate construction with only the first floor finished.

At a later date the attic may be finished to add two bedrooms and a second bath for increased family requirements.

Think of the comforts your family can enjoy in this carefully planned home, complete with porch and an attached garage which enhances its appearance of generous size.

Tool Now Used Instead Brush To Apply Paint

Brushes are not the only devices that can transfer paint from cans to walls.

There is a tool which rolls the paint onto the surface. With the paint brush bristle situation serious, this new roller may offer an answer to the problem.

The tool consists of a wooden roller covered with a resilient fabric cushion. The cushiony surface of the roller can take up and hold a lot of paint, and distributes it evenly without lapping or streaking when rolled over the wall.

Effortless to use, the roller was designed especially for the application of the new resin-emulsion wall finishes which hide most surfaces in one coat and dry rapidly to a mat finish. It can be used to apply the paint to wallpaper, brick, wallboard, plaster or painted walls.

For the first time, the makers say, it is possible to gain a stippled effect with a paint which is thinned with water. Stippling tools previously could be used only with oil-base paints, as the water-mixed ones dried too quickly, but this roller achieves the right effect as it glides over the surface.

The roller presents no upkeep problem. There are no bristles to mat and harden. Just slip the fabric roller from the handle and wash it in water after each use.

Refuse Bonus

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Sept. 19.—(CP)—United Church general council officers and superintendents of missions yesterday refused to accept a five per cent cost of living bonus on the grounds that the ministry is a brotherhood and the officers desire to share with all ministers the exactions and sacrifices of these difficult days.

Church News

Augustana Lutheran Church Aids In Promoting Parish Education

Augustana Lutheran church of Edmonton, is joining in promoting an advance in parish education, according to an announcement made by the Rev. J. Arvid Vikman, pastor.

This advance is a part of a national movement in more than a thousand churches for the Augustana Evangelical Lutheran Synod. Statistics show that less than one-half of the persons of school age in Canada are receiving systematic religious instruction, while only five per cent. have had systematic religious instruction.

Because many national leaders are convinced that the morals of the people can not be built up without faithful use of the spiritual resources that have sustained the nation in the past, and because of the desire to help each person reach highest possibilities, several Protestant denominations are redoubling their efforts through the United Christian Education Advance.

PART OF ADVANCE

Parish education month in the local Lutheran church is a part of this advance. A special service will be held here Sunday evening, October 4.

This Sunday, the Sunday school, Bible class and confirmation instruction will take place at 10.00 a.m., with the morning service following at 11.00 a.m.

Evening worship will be conducted at 7.30 p.m. The pastor will preach both sermons.

The Pearl of Great Price

Text: Matthew 13: 45-46.

THIS romantic story is an open secret to those who bring to its consideration open minds, and sincere hearts. The merchantman had a definite object in his search. He was seeking for pearls of whitest lustre, largest size, and loveliest form. He aimed at the choicest.

The trouble with so many is that their aim is too low, they do not seek the things that are above, the Kingdom of God, and His righteousness.

The merchantman was alert, persevering, methodical, determined and courageous in his search. These are some of the qualities needed by those who seek the best things.

If anybody was likely to discover the best pearl it was him, so we are not surprised that he finally found it. And those who are seeking for the best things, whose hearts yearn for the good, the beautiful, and the true, are most likely to find the Pearl of Great Price.

Christ Himself is the Peerless Pearl. We find in Him all we feel the need of: peace with God, rest in heart, a changed life, hope in death, and a Heaven of glory. Only when we have found Him, and have been found of Him, does the great "Eureka" burst from our lips.

In Him alone do we find that fulness for which, consciously or unconsciously, we are looking.

Christ is life's greatest discovery, and its supreme good. Many have sought and found Him, and their unanimous testimony is that He is most precious.

Remember His own words, "He that seeketh findeth." Again, this merchantman sold all that he had, and bought the pearl of great price.

He had been a long time getting his wealth together, and had enjoyed gathering it, but it was as nothing to this pearl of pearls. "I must have that," he cried.

And Christ is life's costliest possession; no sacrifice is too great to secure Him.

Paul declared that he had suffered the loss of all things, that he might win Christ, and counted them as nothing in comparison with Him.

We, too, may be assured that whatever sacrifice we make to win Christ is more than made up to us in Him.

Second Sermon in Series on Sunday

Second in a series of sermons concerning the church in wartime will be given Sunday morning at the First Baptist church. The Rev. Daniel Young will speak on "Breaking Bottlenecks." Anthem will be "I Will Lift up Mine Eyes."

In the evening, Mr. Young will preach about "What is the Church Doing?" Anthem at that time will be "In Humble Faith", and Mrs. F. B. Waite will be soloist.

Hospital Board Lowers Resident Term for City Rates

New Business In Insurance Is Increasing

New business written by insurance companies in Canada this year shows a marked increase despite the fact that all companies are working with depleted field organization, A. B. Wood, Montreal, President, Sun Life Assurance Co., of Canada, stated on arrival here Friday evening in the course of a tour of western Canada.

Mr. Wood is accompanied by Mrs. Wood, H. U. Banks, his secretary, and J. A. McAlister, superintendent of agencies for the company in Canada. Saturday afternoon Mr. Wood will address a meeting that will be attended by agents of the Edmonton branch, and Mr. McAlister will speak on special insurance sales problems.

He said Canadian insurance companies were 100 per cent behind the government's war effort and all new money flowing to the insurance field was being invested in Victory loans. He added that the companies, as a whole, were putting more money into these loans than the net amount received from policy holders This was possible he added, because the companies were re-investing funds from maturing bonds, and also the revenue from investments.

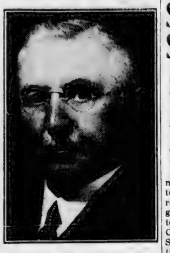

THE FIGURES

In 1941, added Mr. Wood, insurance business totalled $218,000,000, while claims on policies amounted to $152,000,000, leaving a net balance of $66,000,000, but the companies subscribed $142,000,000 to the Victory loan.

He said that in the four war loans issued by the government life insurance companies had invested more than $300,000,000, of which the Sun Life Co. had taken $65,500,000.

He commended the Dominion government's policy of price and wage ceilings to curb inflation, but was of the opinion there should be further price fixing. He said the government had taken sound measures to combat this peril to the nation's security.

ARE YOU ABLE TO READ IN COMFORT?

By J. E. THOMAS, Optometrist

Now that the long nights are closing in on us, men and women will be settling down to do more reading, and especially the women who will be taking up their favorite pastime of knitting. This puts extra strain on your eyes. To eyes that are already deficient and where the trouble has not been corrected, it can end up only in the following: in reading, the print will start to blur or run together, and when knitting, the eyes get sore. This usually ends up in headaches.

Be sure that your eyes are in proper condition so that you may enjoy doing the things you like best in comfort.

Visit our Optical Parlor and have your Optometrist give your eyes a thorough eyesight examination. He will tell you if you need glasses or not.

Period of Complete Year Previously Required Now Reduced to Three Months

At the regular meeting of the Royal Alexandra hospital board, Friday night, it was voted to reduce the length of residence required for "city rates" from twelve months to three months.

Under the new order, persons who reside in the city for three consecutive months may become eligible for the lower "city rates" rather than the "country rates" charged to non-residents.

Dr. A. F. Anderson, superintendent, stated that in past years the method of interpretation has been the definition of a resident as provided in the Hospital Act, and for a number of years, a stay of three months was required by that act.

PERIOD LENGTHENED

This was lengthened to twelve months for purposes of municipal contracts or in the case of indigents, but as Dr. Anderson pointed out, it often works a hardship on persons employed here.

The finance committee reported that cost of operation was high during the holiday months, mounting to $3.70 per patient day for July, and $3.71 per patient day in August. In July, 1941, it was higher, but less for August of that year. This is due in part to fluctuation in bed occupancy, and also to rising costs. The first eight months of 1942 show an increase in operation cost of $31,500 over the same period last year.

The board was advised that the federal government has voted $115,000 to assist in the education of nurses, of which $9,000 has been allocated to Alberta.

Therefore, the board agreed to return to the three-month basis.

Maternal mortality was nil, reported Dr. A. F. Anderson, superintendent, although there were 120 confinements and births during the past year.

500 OPERATIONS

Five hundred operations, of which 68 were emergencies, were performed at the Royal Alexandra during this period. There were 1,079 patients admitted, and 1,041 discharged. Blood transfusions were given to 59 patients, 420 received X-ray treatment, and 33 were cared for in the tuberculosis ward.

The report of the property committee was accepted by the board. This included a recommendation for the purchasing of 12 new hospital beds, and announcement that the city architects department has given the contract for the new building to be constructed between the main hospital and service buildings, on a "cost plus" basis.

Miss S. I. Fraser, superintendent of nurses, announced that a return to the eight-hour day, 48-hour week for nurses was made, September 1.

OCTOBER MEETING

The board was advised that the convention of the Alberta hospital association will be held at the Macdonald hotel, October 5 and 6. The annual meeting of the American Hospital Association will take place in St. Louis, Missouri, beginning October 10. Dr. Anderson was authorized to attend this convention at the expense of the board.

Reports of the executive and finance committee, the purchasing department, and the city collectors were also approved.

Getting Around

Jack DeLong

Highly interesting social implications are contained in the gradual mobilization of women in this country and the United States, for service both in supplementary role to the fighting forces, and in industry. As a matter of fact our blue-printers and economic planners of the post-war period are going to have just about twice as big a headache as a result of this mobilization in the opinion of this column.

With the order of magnitude of war far greater than anything that ever occurred in previous history, all of the nations involved have ceased to look upon the sexes as having distinct and separate roles. Womenpower becomes manpower as far as our leaders are concerned.

During the last war, women worked in the factories of Britain,

Salvage Test Is Scheduled On Friday Next

Youth organizations in the city will be asked to assist the salvage campaign committee by canvassing residences prior to the date of the pick ups, it was decided at the regular meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and Women's Auxiliary Salvage Campaign committee Friday evening.

Reports of nine pickups made to date indicated that in many instances results were not satisfactory and in order to rectify this situation the committee requested Joe McKenzie, head of the Edmonton Youth Council and member of the salvage committee, to approach youth organizations for assistance.

The committee also decided to install lighting and heating facilities at its plant to enable them to carry on their work in the evenings and through the winter months.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE

A special committee was selected with instructions to investigate and gather information that may lead to the acquiring of accumulated heaps of salvage that are still untouched in many parts of the city.

It was also decided that the next zone pickup will be held next Friday commencing at 9 a.m. in the following areas: 111 to 118 avenue between 94 and 87 streets; Jasper avenue and 118 avenue between 87 and 59 streets; 118 to 136 avenue covering all the streets to North Edmonton.

This area includes approximately 2,300 houses. It was also decided that there will be a re-pickup of the Glenora and Westmount areas.

Mrs. A. C. Emery was asked to undertake the canvassing of all machine shops and auto wreckage depots for salvage.

THE QUESTION

THE ANSWERS

MAURICE McLEOD, clerk. Stalingrad may fall. The hordes of German tanks and men may prove too much for the gallant defenders of that city, but if it fails the determination of the Russian people and their leaders to fight to the death against the Nazi aggressors will be not one whit diminished. Regardless of loss of life, sacrifice and suffering the Russians will continue to write glorious pages in the war's history.

JOHN THOMPSON, carpenter. Loss of cities, of large tracts of territory has not shaken the confidence of the Russian people in the outcome of the war. This confidence springs from belief in themselves, in their determination to fight on, in their resources of manpower to fight and produce weapons, and above all in their confidence in their allies. We cannot, we must not let them down.

HARRY FITZGERALD, miner. Today the Russian people are paying in blood and agony far more than the United States, Canada and Britain ever can repay in goods. A nation, hard pressed as Russia is, that can still create new industries, open new mines, drill new oil wells, cultivate new lands to replace those taken by the Nazis cannot be conquered. The burning hatred of the Russians for Germany, the marvellous morale of the people of Russia, will finally defeat the invaders. Stalingrad may fall, but the doom of Hitler and his armies is as certain as the coming of another Russian winter.

Daughter Lauds Her Courageous Mother

Deserted By Mate, She Works Cheerfully To Support Five Children; Has Her Consolations in Hardship, Though

—By DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX: I want to pay tribute to a heroine who never will appear in the headlines but is just as brave as the people we read about who risk death in doomed cities without a whimper because she faces life with courage and dignity and a smile. My mother.

I am 17 today and have earned my first money. All at once it has dawned on me what it has meant to my mother to educate me, support five of us, and work in an office and keep herself attractive and pleasant all these years. My father ran away her and us children. My mother had to go to work to support us and she has made a good job of it. She has fed and clothed and educated us; she has made for us a pleasant home that our friends love to come to, and no matter how long her day at the office, she is always pleasant and smiling.

What I can't understand is that if there is a God of Justice, why anyone as beautiful and fine as my mother should have had such a cruel life. Why should she have had to work so hard? She says it won't change our situation to get bitter about it and that we must live one day at a time. Maybe she is right, but I don't see what she gets out of life. She does no harm to anyone and still she has to go to spend her whole time planning, saving scrimping, to bring us up.

What made me write to you is that to you is that when I was walking past her door I saw her kneeling by her bed. She was crying and praying. She would rather die than let anyone see her cry. But something in me broke over and I saw red. I only hope she lives to see the day when she can enjoy all the things she should have. She will be given them if I can get them for her.

JUST SEVENTEEN.

Answer: Well, my dear, I think any mother who has a daughter who loves, admires, appreciates and understands her as you do yours, is a lucky woman even if she has nothing else.

Not many mothers are so fortunate, for you give her something far more precious in their eyes than all the fine clothes and houses and limousines.

HAS HER CONSOLATIONS

Certainly your mother is a fine, brave woman; she is as heroic as any soldier whose breast is covered with medals. It takes much more courage to face life than it does to face death. It takes nerve, stamina, to go on fighting poverty and hardships and discouragement, year after year, than it does to lead a charge in battle. Your mother has had that sort of cold courage. You do well to honor her.

But you are wrong in thinking she has no consolations, no rewards. She has had plenty and you have no need to break your own heart in pitying her, for if she has known the martyr's crown of thorns she also has worn the victor's wreath of laurel.

She has had the joy of achievement, and when you are older you will know that is one of the purest pleasures we ever experience. A craven husband deserted her leaving her and her little brood destitute. She didn't go on relief. She didn't turn beggar. She didn't become a burden on her relatives and friends. She went out, got work and did it so well that she was able to give her children a good home and education and fit them for their own battle with the world. When a woman does that, and stands squarely on her own feet, she gets a thrill that is a consolation prize for many misfortunes.

It burns you up because your mother has had to work so hard, but work has not been a curse to her. It has been her blessing. It has kept her too busy to grow morbid in brooding over her faithless husband. It has given her an interest in life that has lighted the fires of ambition in her soul and made her realize that new avenues of life opened before her instead of feeling that she had come to a dead end and everything was over with her. For the woman who has troubles to bear there is no anodyne like work. No woman who has a good job ever dies of a broken heart.

And above all, your mother has her children. No woman is utterly desolate if she has children who love and appreciate her and are growing into fine men and women. When she has these she has the best gift God can give anyone so don't let your mother's fate make you bitter and resentful. She has had the privilege to rise above her sorrows and keep smiling. Out of what threatened to be a bad life she has made a good one. Try to emulate her.

BETTER WAIT

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am a boy, the young end, and have been in the air force for over a year. I have met a girl of 18 who is deeply in love with me and has asked me to marry her. Her father is well off. I have known this girl six months and have been going with her steadily. What should I do?

JOHN.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am an Australian airman and have been stationed in Canada for nearly a year. I have fallen in love with a Canadian girl who wants to marry me, but I am afraid that if I took her back to Australia with me she might not like my country or my people and might be unhappy. This problem is one that not only I, but many other boys are confronting, for the Canadian girls are very attractive. What would you advise me to do?

J. M.

Answer: My earnest advice to all young men in the service is to put off marriage for the duration. Make love to the pretty girls as much as you like. Get engaged to them if you want to take an option on their affections, but put off signing the marriage contract until after the war and you know where you stand and what you are going to do and whether the girl looks as good to you then as she does now. Also how she feels about it.

There is a verse that every soldier should commit to memory now when men are being buffeted about the world to far countries. It goes like, this:

"Like a fire upon the hearthstone is a neighbor's homely daughter.

That means that the safest matrimonial bet is the girl back home who has your own background, your own tastes and prejudices and knows your own way of cooking.

IT'S DANGEROUS

It's dangerous to take any girl out of her own community and try to transplant her in a strange and foreign land. Sometimes it can be done, but generally it ends in a divorce or her nagging her husband into taking her back to the place that will always be home to her, but never home to him.

No boy of 19 should think of getting married no matter how much the girl is in love with him nor how well off her father is. If one pops the question to him he should tell her that this is so sudden and that she must give him time to think it over. He must keep on thinking it over until the war is ended and he is back home safe.

One Clear Call

By Nellie McClung

WHEN Angela Peters reached the sanctuary of her own home on the evening of Jean Snowden's wedding she sat for a long time on her back verandah, looking out over the ivory white romnias that gleamed in the gathering dusk. The moon, approaching the full, flung a silver band across the water, a broad shining sash which seemed to her a sign that beauty still lived upon this troubled earth.

The day had been one crowded hour of life, the hurried sending, borrowings and lendings, the overflowing church, the good-byes, and then the startling news from Jean Snowden, the bride's mother, that she had received word of her son's death just as they left the house to go to the church but had said nothing about it, and had sent her daughter away happy on her honeymoon. Still more strange was Mrs. Snowden's explanation — how in that moment of panic, when she lifted her heart to God for strength, a shot of energy had come to her from somewhere, and in it she seemed to get a new vision of herself.

ONE LOVE IN LIFE

Angela Peters believed she knew Mrs. Snowden as well as anyone was likely to know her. No one ever called Mrs. Snowden by her first name, not even her husband. "Estrella" it was, which is not a name to be lightly bandied about. And someway that name described her. She was beautiful to look at, she never hurried, never gossiped, never seemed part of this present complex world. The one love of her life was her only son Frank, tall, handsome Frank, with all his mother's reserve and aloofness; clever in school, faultless in behaviour, admired by his teachers but not popular with people.

Jean, the one daughter, was like her father, with a round face, dark curly hair, and eyes inclined to freckle. What she lacked in regularity of features she made up in the warmth of her personality. The young people of Laburnum looked forward to Jean's parties, held in a wide room in the basement of the Snowden home, with a waxed floor, red brick fireplace and its own little kitchen; and although no one else in Laburnum village entertained with a hired orchestra and ice cream molded in roses and anchors, Jean had just as good a time when Susie Smith, who worked in the telephone office, gave a dance in her father's garage and served weiners and buns. Money was just a happy incident in Jean's life—something which made it possible for her to project her personality.

STRANGE EFFECT

But Mrs. Snowden seemed an integral part of the whole system of Canada. Her cool face, with its cameo beauty, would look well on the Bank of Canada bills. Angela wondered about the power of money and the strange effect it has on some people, how it cools their blood and makes it run cold heart. Mrs. Snowden was generous to all good causes, but she never seemed to give liberally and joyously. She wrote cheques and kept records. Still, there was no one just like her, and the people of Laburnum had pride in her as they had in their view of Mt. Baker and the flower fields which bordered the village.

There had been a bitter undercurrent for a long time when it was known that she prevented Frank's marriage to Olive Hayes, when Frank was home on his last leave. Frank and Olive had been engaged before the war. It seemed she just could not bear to share Frank with anybody. The strangest part of all that Mrs. Snowden had told Angela was that she saw herself as a selfish woman, who had always let someone else bear the burden for her, and Angela wondered now if her enlightened conscience would show her the injustice she had done to Olive. Could it be that Mrs. Snowden had really experienced "conversion"? Mrs. Snowden had probably never heard that word and certainly it is not much used these days, Angela thought, but she knew it—she had seen the hand of God laid on people when she went in All People's Mission in Winnipeg, she had seen evil desires, cast out of people and families come together who had been long estranged. Having some of Cornish stock Angela Peters (who had been Angela Penryn), remembered the old Methodist couplet concerning the man who fell from his horse:

"He mercy sought and mercy found

LISTENING WORLD

It was a warm September evening, with a smell of honey in the air from the flowers and the ripening fruit, and as the moon mounted higher in the cloudless sky it seemed to gather the whole of the listening world into the magic circle of its silver light. Tinker, the cat, came and slept on her knee, and Toby, her black dog, lay with his head on her feet. There was comfort in the silence and loneliness—no one should be lonely, she thought, with two such good companions. Perhaps Olive, Pershaps it was the moonlight working on her. She thought of Evangeline who looked out of the window of her father's home in Grand Pre, that last night before any shadow of sorrow had come to her—

God made us lonely souls, thought Angela, so that we would never be entirely satisfied with earthly things, and yet how afraid we are to believe. And even I, who have seen the Grace of God transform people, am suspicious that Mrs. Snowden got this shot of energy as a reflex action from her determination to do what was obviously the right thing to do. It required both courage and self-control, and having determined to do it, a warm feeling of exaltation seized her. It was a new sensation for her to find herself thinking of somebody else. I will be more disposed to believe in the reality of her change of heart when I hear what she has had to say to Olive—poor Olive, who had her wedding dress all ready and all her plans made.

OLIVE CALLS

A quick step sounded on the walk and Angela heard Olive's voice calling her. She called back to Olive to come and join her. Not knowing whether Olive had heard the news, she spoke casually:

"Sit here Olive" she said, "your hands are cold, dear. I'll give you Tinker to warm them. I was just going over the events of the day here, alone, and enjoying the beauty of the night."

"She told me, Angela," Olive said, after a long pause. "She sent word to me to come to her room. She wasn't willing to share him with me and now neither of us have him. I couldn't say a word to her at first, my heart was like lead, for although I saw Frank's weakness in letting his mother rule him, he was my first love, and probably will be my last one too. Today when I put on the dress I had made for my own wedding I renounced Frank in my heart. I couldn't help contrasting him with Jim Andrews, who did battle for his girl and won. I knew than I could never marry Frank. But it hurt. I tried to sympathize with her in her loss, but not mine, for I had already lost him. She told me she had done me a great injustice and I could see that she was sorry. She's a different woman, Angela, some way. All that old pride seems dead and gone. She told me she wanted to come and live with them. We need you Olive, she said. She wants me to think of her as I would of my own mother, and there's strange love for her in me, I told her the truth. There's something about her now that brought the truth right out of me. I didn't intend to tell her that I declined to break off the engagement. It seemed like an awful thing for me to say to Frank's mother, sitting there with the telegram in her hand—but I had to tell her. And what is stranger still, she understood. And Angela, she told me she hoped I would forget all this sad and bitter time, for I was young with life all ahead of me, and she hoped I would find someone else. What strange mystery is this, Angela? She seems now like a new person. I could love to the end of time."

The next day everybody knew that Frank Snowden had gone down with his ship. Laburnum village mourned sincerely, and the flag on the High school flew at half-mast. Angela knew that something, they said, the wire had not come on Jean's wedding day—that would have spoiled everything.

Your Baby And Mine

By MILDRED MEYER ELDRED

Boils on knees are a pretty common apectacle in early childhood when children fall down, scratch and bruise their knees and give bacteria everywhere present a chance to settle on the bruised spots and set up infection.

Boils on tiny babies, not so bruised, are another matter. It has always been my understanding, and this supposition should be checked with the baby's doctor, that boils on infants arose from unbalanced diets. Too much fat, perhaps, for a child with some fat indigestion, or too much starch in the diet. Given such a lack of balance it might happen that on areas of irritation, such as on buttocks or head or eyes, a boil might result.

It has been my experience, too, that alteration of the diet of a child has a beneficial effect.

Mrs. B. says her baby girl of 11 months has had a series of boils, two on the buttocks, one on her eyelid and one on the back of her head. They are about 3 to 4 days coming and after breaking give off pus and blood.

"6 a.m.—bottle of grade A milk.

"9 a.m.—three ounces of orange juice.

"10 a.m.—bottle and cooked cereal with mashed bananas and milk.

"2 p.m.—egg yolk every other day, or beef broth or vegetable soup with milk and custard or pudding.

"6 p.m.—pre-cooked breakfast food with fruit and milk.

"In these is the cause for these boils in the diet? Otherwise she is a healthy baby. I have been told to give her alcohol rubs. Is that advisable?"

The diet is a good one. But, if it has resulted in boils it would be well to adjust it some for your baby.

Use a partially skimmed milk for a time, as your milk may be extra rich. But the milk, cool and keep in bee. Offer either bananas or cereal at 10 a.m. but not both. If you give egg don't give custard the same day. Give custard or gelatine in preference to cereal puddings which might make the weight of starches too great for one day.

At any sign of a swelling use sterile gauze dipped in boric acid solution as a dressing until the boil comes to a head. This dressing will keep the area around the budding boil from becoming infected by its secretions when it does break. Ask the doctor about the alcohol rubs. They might be too drying for baby's skin.

Our leaflet, "Diet and Daily Schedule," offers menus for babies from 1 to 2 years. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

What To Do

A good kind of a party, and a popular one at this season is an outdoor supper. People are very intrigued with an outdoor charcoal fire, and a chef who really knows how to broil a steak in the open.

Your own backyard is the ideal spot for this, and then if the evening proves too cool after supper, move your party indoors to the recreation room.

If you can make good French fried potatoes that would recommend these as an accompaniment to the steaks, and also chilled, sliced tomatoes. Have pie for dessert, and plenty of hot coffee and your guests will have plenty of nourishing, wholesome food, and you won't have too much work.

It is an erroneous idea that potted plants grow best in porous clay pots, says Ellen Browder Bean in her "Practical Garden Notebook." The fact is that glazed pots keep in the moisture and protect the roots next to the pot—thus keeping them from drying out before the soil shows need of water. A testimony of this false idea are the beautiful plants grown by the negroes of the South in tin cans, old paint buckets and lard tins. It is obvious that containers for plants do not have to be porous.

Mrs. Clementine Van Clochem demonstrates in today's hand that it takes expert bridge to win the amateur title. Holding the South hand, she played low from dummy on the opening lead and won the trick with the Ace. Although she could have won with the Jack in dummy, she wanted to save both honors here for a sure re-entry to the hand.

The next move was to lead hearts and force out the ace. East could do no better than continue spades. West won and tried a desperate shift to the queen of clubs, but the king forced the ace and South's jack won the next round. As the diamond king was picked up, the defense won no more tricks.

Winnipeg Wheat Trade is Listless

WINNIPEG, Sept. 19—(CP)—Wheat trading was listless on the short session of Winnipeg grain exchange today and the October future closed unchanged at 90 cents a bushel. Sales were confined to small amounts.

There was no export business in wheat flour and the floor was deserted most of the session.

Cash wheat trade was small. Only minor quantities of touch No. 3 Northern was taken by mills late yesterday and today, but sales of the other grades in demand were restricted to odd cars.

In the coarse grain pit, rye opened strong on further buying credited to southern houses presumably against sales at Chicago. Late buying faded and a little increase in offerings weakened prices. Shippers and locals were credited with scattered support in barley and December oats.

Country marketings yesterday totalled 646,000 bushels against 1,348,000 bushels a year ago. Grain inspections amounted to 204 cars compared with 703 cars a year ago.

Harvesters Are Exempt Income Tax

Because there have been complaints that some farmers were deducting income tax from harvesters, William Carnill, director of the Edmonton Unemployment Insurance Commission office, pointed out that harvest hands are exempt from the dominion income tax for September, October and November.

It has been claimed that the practice of deductions being made from the harvesters' wages has deterred men from seeking employment in the fields.

An order from Ottawa states that harvest workers are exempt for this period, and entitled to their full pay.

LIBERAL'S STAND

Freedom, Order Should Have Working Balance Maj. Buchanan States

The system known as a political democracy is basically the balance between freedom and order and the Liberal party stands for a working balance between these forces, Maj. Nelles V. Buchanan, M.C., Liberal candidate in the Sept. 22 provincial by-election, declared at a campaign meeting in the Garneau Community hall Friday night.

Ald. A. Bisset was chairman and about 35 attended the meeting.

"In the post-war world to which I look forward there will be a balance between freedom and order in the state," declared Maj. Buchanan.

"On many occasions, both from the platform and by radio, I have indicated that in my opinion, even in wartime, an election is a proceeding worthy of a democracy's attention; that the maintenance of interest in political and economic affairs may well accompany complete devotion to direct war endeavor—that the two need not, and in my opinion, do not clash.

DEMOCRACY'S WEAKNESS

"I have emphasized too the fact that this struggle in which an entire world is now engaged has shown under a bright and painful light one of the weaknesses in the democratic or parliamentary system—that weakness is the fact that the democracy is not so effective in the prosecution of a war as a totalitarian or dictator state has turned out to be. The reason is obvious. The democracy functions and justifies itself upon the assumption that peace is the normal condition of humanity and that war is an exceptional phenomenon, whereas the dictatorship has accustomed its people to tolerate the thought that the highest and noblest purpose at which the state can aim is the making and waging of successful war.

"Were the question asked, 'What is the essence of the Liberal attitude and the Liberal approach to the solution of political and economic problems?' the answer in my view is this: The system that we know as a political democracy is basically the balance between freedom and order. It is certainly not all freedom: undoubtedly a democracy is capable of discipline, capable of imposing heavy obligations on its members, and capable on occasions of coercing its minorities. The Liberal party stands for a working balance between those forces of freedom and order.

"In the post-war world to which I look forward there will be a balance between freedom and order in the state. There will be order and control in those spheres of activity dealing with the essentials of life: every citizen must have them—a sound minimum standard of food, clothing, shelter and fuel—full and equal opportunities of education, together with the leisure and facilities for enjoying it. He must be secured against the risks of unemployment, ill health, and old age. All these things are the right of an individual as a citizen. The presence of children in the family must not bring with it misery for the parents, deprivation for the children, and poverty for all.

MOVING IN CANADA

"Towards the securing in full of these rights we have moved in Canada under a Liberal regime and we are continuing to move. As a recent example I would cite the Health Insurance Act, under consideration during the last couple of years and nearing the stage where it will be introduced into the House of Commons at Ottawa.

MAXIMUM WAR EFFORT

"I have confirmed on a series of occasions from the platform and by radio my conviction that every candidate and every party engaged in this election is sincerely and genuinely determined that every energy of the citizens and of the government of this province, shall be directed to the winning of the war. Our friends of the C.C.F. have taken exception to our reminding the public that during the last ten years that party has been the outstandingly pacifistic party in the Dominion. The C.C.F. candidate wants to know whether we Liberals do not expect that the policies of other parties shall develop, expand and if necessary change with the changing times. Most certainly we do. So have those of the Liberal party, in fact—so do those of any live and growing party.

"The question which I put to the citizens at large was this: Is it wise at this time to choose either provincial or dominion leaders from the C.C.F. Party, whose convictions have always been hostile to the all-out prosecution of a war at any time, under any circumstances. I suggested, and I repeat, that it is quite sound for a party to repent of its previous opinions, but is that any reason why that particular party say 'most certainly we are zealous makers of war.' Did Mr. Churchill search out a Stanley Baldwin to put in his cabinet? How long did it take the people of England to rid themselves of the appeaser Chamberlain? In other words, regardless of a change of heart on the part of the C.C.F., dare we choose from among them the makers of war?

OLD AGE PENSIONS

"For some reason or other some of the parties contesting this election seek everlastingly to convey to the public a definitely false impression, namely that they alone of the parties seek the social and economic welfare of our people. High pretenses of that sort are completely unjustified. To illustrate my point: back in 1936 in a Loberal convention in this city, I personally drafted a resolution for presentation to our own government at Ottawa, in which I urged that the government administer with greater generosity and less consideration of technicalities, the Old Age Pension Act. In that resolution, I further urged that the age retirement should not be so vigorously enforced. I pointed out that in fact some people are "burned out" at 50, whereas others may be hale and hearty at 70. It was submitted that the pension should be awarded when the physical condition of the applicant demanded it.

"My stand on Old Age Pensions is that the dominion and provincial acts should be stripped of the features that tend to make the pensioner a pauper of the state—that the age limit should be reduced from 70 to 65 and that the monthly payment should be increased from $20.00 to a decent living allowance: that over a period of time there should be developed under this act a scheme of pensions payable on the basis of need, whether by reason of age or physical disability, my conviction being that any Canadian who has discharged his responsibility to the state is entitled to the essentials of life, that these are the citizens by right.

SOCIAL SECURITY

"In this year 1942 no party would have the audacity to come before an Alberta electorate without having a well-conceived plan for the social betterment of our citizenry. For generations we have affected in this Dominion to be a Christian people. Most churches in their own conclaves have drafted plans for social reconstruction. It is the aim of all, and as speedily as possible, to bring about what has been known as a Christian Social Order. However, in studying political and economic history I do not find any examples of the overthrow in a month, a year, or a decade, of any financial or economic set-up which has endured through centuries and which has steadily evolved and progressed. Surely in this province we do not need any further warning to avoid the fantastic in the field of monetary, economic and social reform. The Social Credit folk had a laudable ambition when they entered office; they thought that they could guarantee and secure to every citizen a monthly payment of $25.00.

"Seven years of office have obviously convinced them that that was a hopeless and impossible dream, having in mind the constitutional set-up under which we live in this Dominion. To be sure, the Social Crediters have never been frank and honest enough to come out and confess their complete inability to do what they said they would do. The much boasted plan of the C.C.F. to raze the capitalist system and substitute in its place something much more attractive would prove, if tried, just as complete and hopeless a task as that upon which Social Credit embarked. Be not deceived, my friends. In that direction does not lie the securing to our citizenry of those things which make for a well-rounded and satisfactory life. Social reform in this Dominion in the last hundred years has been steady. No matter how loudly our opponents may chatter on the grinding of the faces of the poor under this present system, the fact still remains that on this North American continent the mass of the people during the last twenty-five years have enjoyed the highest standard of living of any people in the world.

"Just how would our opponents account for that fact if not that the modern democratic system is looking to the welfare of the commonality. I remind you again that I am a radical and progressive Liberal, that any measure which aims at the betterment of the condition of all the people, the establishment of as great a degree of equality among men as is possible, will have my ardent support. .Mdaparty vw

SOLDIER REPRESENTATION

"Scarcely a home in this city of ours which has not its representative in the armed forces of His Majesty. To those of you who have sons and husbands in any of the fighting forces I quite frankly ask that you decide whether it is not wise at this time to choose a member who, through active participation in the last war and from intimate association with our present fighting forces, has a background which might be thought almost essential for a spokesman on behalf of the troops and their families. Some are of the opinion that after the last war the fighting forces missed an opportunity to impress their mind, their viewpoint, upon the public—to give to the discussions and decisions of politicians and statesmen the sober, sane and progressive views of those who had fought for their convictions. The returned folk at that time were relegated a bit too far into the background, don't you think? See to it at this time that the capacities of the fighting forces are not overlooked in time of peace."

Gordon Jorden of Hinton, Alberta, is in a serious condition at a hospital in Edson. He was attacked by a black bear, Sept. 16.

He was in the bush near Hinton, cutting wood when he ran into the bear with her two cubs. He attempted to climb a tree, but the bear caught his feet and pulled him down.

The man managed to escape, and by throwing down his coat and vest, attracted the bear's attention long enough to run away. He reached a garage in town, painfully injured and exhausted, and was rushed to the hospital.

R.O. Explains Voting System In By-Election

Electors in Tuesday's provincial by-election must mark their ballots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 in the order of their choice of candidates and must NOT mark their ballots with a cross (X) or place any other marks except the figures on the ballots, H. H. Crawford, returning officer, stated Saturday when explaining the method of voting in the by-election.

"Voters must use the figures 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 in the order of their choice of the five candidates, as the candidate will be elected by the P. R. (proportional representation) system," Mr. Crawford said.

DON'T "PLUMP"

He urged electors not to "plump" for a candidate—voting for one candidate only. "Every voter should complete his or her ballot with the full number of choices," he stated. "If an elector places only the figure 1 beside the name of his first choice candidate and leaves it at that, not marking his other choices, he may lose his vote. The candidate he has marked for first choice may drop out during the count, and as he hasn't marked his other choices, his vote is lost."

The returning officer said that the first choice votes would be compiled at the polls by the deputy returning officers, who would then immediately take the ballot boxes to the I.O.O.F. Hall, 103 street, for the completion of the count. About 40 persons would be engaged in the compilation of the final count, he said.

To be elected a candidate must have 51 per cent of the total number of votes cast in the by-election.

The returning officer warned that no campaign literature must be posted inside any poll or outside within 100 feet of the poll. No literature may be distributed outside within 100 feet of the poll.

Social Credit Dividend Received by Albertans in Social, Economic Advances

The Social Credit government has paid Alberta citizens a handsome dividend in better roads, improved health and education services and by the passage of labor legislation to protect employees in all industries operating in the province, John B. Gillies, Social Credit candidate in the Sept. 22 provincial by-election, declared Friday night.

Mr. Gillies addressed campaign meetings at Westmount community hall and the Slovak Hall at Beverly, as well as meetings held in private homes in the Jasper Place and Walterdale districts. About 25 persons attended the Westmount meeting and the audience numbered about 40 at Beverly.

Hon. W. A. Fallow, minister of public works, spoke in support of Mr. Gillies' candidature at the Beverly meeting, declaring that the Social Credit party was the only group that had offered a definite and scientific solution for the country's social and economic ills.

Anthony Hlynka, New Democracy (Social Credit) M.P. for Vegreville, also spoke in support of Mr. Gillies at the Beverly meeting.

OTHER SPEAKERS

At the Walterdale meeting Mr. Gillies was supported by E. D. Shaw, New Democracy (Social Credit) M.P. for Red Deer, and Mrs. Edith Gostick, ex-M.L.A. and provincial librarian.

Record of the Social Credit government was dealt with by Mrs. Cornelia B. Wood, M.L.A., Stony Plain, and A. J. Hooke, M.L.A., Rocky Mountain House, when they urged the election of the Social Credit candidate at the Westmount meeting.

"I would like to deal with some of the C.C.F. policies as expressed in this by-election campaign. The C.C.F. has borrowed much of its material from the Social Credit platform.

"Both the Social Credit party and the C.C.F. agree with each other on the need for social reforms, but differ in their views on the methods to be taken to obtain these reforms. The C.C.F. can do all the way with the Social Credit in its program, but we can only go so far with the C.C.F.

The Social Credit party believes that the ailment in the body politic can be cured with one operation—the abolition of the present profit system.

MISUNDERSTANDING

"I would like to clear up a misunderstanding with respect to a statement I made Thursday in connection with the C.C.F. program. I did not say that the C.C.F. would institute a policy of confiscation of property which would lead to bloodshed and revolution. I did say, however, that in taking over property only two methods were open to any government that wanted to try it.

"One method is confiscation, which would lead to revolution and bloodshed. Anglo-Saxons living in a democracy refuse to give up what they believe to be their rights. I don't think the C.C.F. would attempt such a course.

"The only other method left would be to purchase the property. In order to do this the government would have to borrow from the bank, the only place a government can go to borrow money. This would give the bank control over the business—the very thing we are trying to get away from.

"The Social Credit movement is a young movement. It is only seven years old. But the movement to obtain social and economic reform is an old one. This government is giving direction to this movement, for it realizes the profit system is the cause of our ailment.

"I believe the C.C.F. can play its part in the rest of Canada where there is no other progressive movement; but it is not needed in Alberta where the Social Credit party stands for progressive reforms.

"While the Liberal government was in power in this province it piled up a debt of $90,000,000. The U.F.A. government ran the people into additional debt of $75,000,000.

"The province may be likened to a company, with the government as the directors and the people as the shareholders. It looks to me as if the people of Alberta before 1935 fired its directors for not delivering the goods.

"Mr. Lymburn has been criticizing this government for not paying the dividend. Yet Mr. Lymburn is aligned with that group which prevented it.

PAID DIVIDEND

"But I would like to point out that the Social Credit government has paid its dividend in other ways——better roads, improved health and education services and by the passage of labor legislation to protect all workers.

"This government has improved our financial situation by the adoption of a pay-as-you-go policy.

"The government attempted to negotiate a satisfactory settlement with bondholders' representatives on the question of debenture interest, a settlement which would be fair to all, but these negotiations failed.

"I was speaking to a man the other day who told me he was glad to get 50 per cent interest on his Alberta government bonds. He said that other securities he had held have proved worthless.

"With respect to the reduction in interest rates on government bonds I would like to point out that most of these debentures were held by financial institutions.

"Other classes of investors have been affected, of course, but what was the alternative The government had to cut the interest rates or tax the people to maintain the high rates paid bondholders. And some of those who would have been taxed would have been widows and others, many of them unable to pay such increased taxation.

"This government inherited about $10,000,000 owing on acreage certificates payments from the U.F.A. government. The present government has redeemed about half of these.

POSSIBLE PLAN

"When this redemption is completed, the government will be able to turn its attention to the bonds held by widows and others who need relief. It may be possible for the government to purchase these bonds and retire them in the usual way.

"Under the old borrowing system our bonds were rapidly getting into bad shape; but the pay-as-you-go policy adopted by this government is bolstering their value."

MR. FALLOW'S ADDRESS

The address delivered by Mr. Fallow at Beverly in support of Mr. Gillies' candidature follows:

"The meeting we address this evening I want to stress a factor which will have a bearing on our very existence after the war. In this war, it is the 'new order.'

"People talk so glibly about this new order. It will provide a panacea for all our ills; there will be no more unemployment, no more poverty when the new order is brought about; every possible health service and every other social service conceivable will be handed to the people; in short, it will place us in a veritable Garden of Eden.

HAZY IDEA

"Many have suggested that we need this new order—this Mecca toward which we are struggling. But doesn't it strike you as being very significant that these same people have only the haziest idea about how we are going to achieve this Utopian state of life?

"And here is another significant point: the same people who told you that the First Great War was a war to end war and that after it was ended everything would be rosy; that the returned men were going to be looked after and everyone else was going to get a good living — these same people are promising us the same kind of new order after this war.

"As you all know, we didn't get the promised reforms after the last war, and we're not likely to get them after this war unless you personally throw in your weight for victory and then demand a new order.

"I submit to you, my friends, that the Social Credit Party is the only party in the long history of this country that has offered a definite and scientific solution for our social and economic ills; the only party that has given you a clear explanation and offered a logical program leading to this new order.

"You must realize that the new order will be what we make it; if we leave to the bankers and the politicians the new state of affairs will be worse than the old. These individuals have a one-track mind. They only do things that will benefit themselves—every man for himself and devil take the hindmost, as it were.

CAN END POVERTY

"I maintain that it is possible for the new order to end poverty in Canada, to give every single person in this great country a decent standard of living and end that hateful discrimination through which a few live on the fat of the land and the rest get next to nothing. Of course it's possible. But remember this—the great masses of the people of this country must take this matter in their own hands and see that the reforms were are all crying for are adopted.

"You can't just sit back and let the politicians and bankers down to you a solution. You know the kind of 'solution' they're interested in. You've been suffering with it since the last war.

"And now I would like to deal with something that offers Alberta the brightest possible future if it is handled right. I refer to the development of our resources, particularly in the north country.

"In that vast hinterland of Northern Alberta and the North West Territory lies the key to our economic future; the buried treasure that can revolutionize our way of life. The mineral riches of that territory have been barely scratched; they are waiting for the day when we develop them.

"What this will mean to Edmonton any person can see if he or she takes the trouble to look at the map. This capital city stands at the gateway to these riches; and with the development of these great resources, Edmonton will be at the cross-roads to the world.

STRATEGIC POSITION

"In my opinion, developments in this greatest of all wars has placed this city in the most important strategic position of any point in the world.

"Geographically, our position is unrivalled and as the years pass our position is going to become more important. We stand at the gateway to the Orient, the doorway to Asia. We are a key city for air routes spanning the globe. We are the link between the old world and the new.

"When you understand this you will easily understand the industrial potentialities of this province. We can start to build up our factories and do a flourishing trade if we once get away from the discriminatory freight rates and the federal tariff policy.

"We have all the raw material we need for the manufacture of a thousand-and-one products but we face the trade barrier set up by the eastern financial interests. They do a very lucrative business in the west; we are very good customers; they believe that if we expand industrially they will lose this market.

"That reasoning, my friends, is fallacious. If we develop our own factories our population will increase a thousand fold. Think of the market that will provide for the east.

NOT MENTIONED

"And in closing I want to ask you this: have you ever heard the other groups that are tonight asking for your support in the provincial by-election ever mention this vast program that we deal with tonight? You know you haven't.

"But the Social Credit government is well aware of the potentialities of this province which can be harnessed to give you all a good living. And by voting for John B. Gillies, the government's candidate, next Tuesday, Sept. 22, you will be taking another step toward the realization of the new order."

MR. HOOKE SPEAKS

Speaking in support of Mr. Gillies at the Westmount meeting, A. J. Hooke, M.L.A., Rocky Mountain House, said:

"I am speaking tonight in place of Mr. Maynard, who was scheduled to deliver an address but who has been unavoidably detained.

"I regret the circumstance that have made this by-election necessary. In the death of Mr. Duggan this city and province has lost a fine citizen. While many of us did not agree with his policies, we all admire the fight he made for the things he stood for.

"I along with many others, was a new member in the house in 1935; we all appreciated the help Mr. Duggan gave us.

"I would like to deal with the C.C.F. program for a few moments. The Social Credit government has already put into effect the platform which the C.C.F. is urging. The health services include the tuberculosis and cancer clinics and the travelling dental clinic. If the C.C.F. is asking any more than this I would like to point out it will require no less than half of the provincial revenue to take care of it.

"With respect to education, this government is doing all it can possibly do.

"With respect to labor legislation, Hon. Mr. Manning as minister of trade and industry has been instrumental in bringing about much-needed reforms. This is reflected in the fact that in the 1940 election Mr. Manning obtained the greatest majority obtained by any candidate

"As you all know, we didn't get the promised reforms after the last war, and we're not likely to get them after this war unless you personally throw in your weight for victory and then demand a new order.

"As you all know, old age pension is a federal matter, but the province fought for a reduction in the pension age and an increase in the state. Several times the dominion government was not going to make a move in this direction, the province gave each pensioner a $5 bonus per month.

"The Social Credit government fought for an equitable settlement of debts, but it met legislative reverses in the court at the hands of the federal government.

"All these points in the C.C.F. program are already a part of the Social Credit program.

"Public ownership, as proposed by the C.C.F., doesn't help us unless you get control of the monetary system. The Bank of Canada, for instance, is publicly-owned. But what difference can you see in the banking system? There is no difference. The same financial interests are in control.

"From 1920 to 1928 the bankers were anxious to loan money. Farmers and others took the loans, and put up bonds and insurance policies with cash surrender value as collateral. Credit was made free and easy. Then in 1929 banks called in the loans. Consequently there was less money in circulation and the people suffered. Life insurance policies and government bonds put up as collateral were lost by the borrowers.

"Rothschild once said: 'Let me govern the purse-strings of a nation and I care not who makes its laws.' He was right. If you control the wealth of a nation it doesn't matter what government is in power.

BLAST HIS WAY

"In 1930 a man was elected to head the Canadian government who said he would 'blast his way into the markets of the world.' You all know who that man was.

"During that regime the government tried to create a favorable balance of trade by selling to other countries more than it bought from them. But these other countries were also trying the same thing and so the plan failed.

"Then Hitler came along. We sold him all we could and we're now reaping the benefit of that policy.

"If we leave the monetary system as it is and attempt socialization of industry, we still haven't solved our problem. We must change our monetary system first.

"There is no reson for a depression. It is caused by the monetary system."

"In closing I would urge you to vote for the Social Credit candidate, Mr. Gillies, who is representing the government that is trying to abolish this system."

MRS. WOOD'S ADDRESS

Speaking in support of Mr. Gillies at the Westmount community hall, Mrs. Cornelia B. Wood, M.L.A., Stony Plain, said:

"I regret that this by-election is necessary. The death of Mr. Duggan is a matter of sincere regret to me. He was always very helpful to many of us when we first sat as members of the legislature.

"I am proud to be a supporter of this government which has a record which is unequalled anywhere else in Canada.

"There has been no increase in the public debt, the government having adopted a pay as you go policy. In view of the fact it was faced with a financial dictatorship, the Social Credit government accomplished quite a feat in not borrowing.

"Under this government came into power it was faced with a debt structure which required 50 cents of every taxpayers' dollar to meet the interest charges.

"Mr. Lymburn has stated that the Social Credit government has ruined Alberta's credit. Yet he was a member of the government that helped create the debt situation.

LOST SECURITIES

"As for the 50 per cent reduction in interest on Alberta bonds instituted by this government, it is a well-known fact that many persons lost all their securities prior to 1935 when the Social Credit Party came into power. The 50 per cent reduction in interest has not worked a hardship on the majority of the people.

"This government has increased its social services and constructed many good roads. The Calgary highway, is one of them.

"As far as the debt situation is concerned, it is very pleasant indeed to find the government of Ontario is joining with Manitoba and Saskatchewan in supporting Alberta's appeal to the privy council on the action taken by the Supreme Court of Canada in ruling the Alberta Debt Adjustment Act invalid.

"Figures I have with me tonight show that during the period July, 1937, to Dec. 31, 1940, the debt adjustment period, 4,083 cases were dealt with by the Debt Adjustment Board. Adjustments resulted in a reduction of debt from a total of about $4,107,000 to approximately $2,440,000.

"If all delqenire interest had been paid in full by this government it would have been at the expense of health and educational services.

(Here Mrs. Wood dealt extensively with action taken by the Social Credit government in the field of health and education. A full report of this was given by Mrs. Wood in a campaign speech she delivered Wednesday night and which was reported in Thursday's issue of The Bulletin.)

"For years women fought for the franchise and didn't do much about it when they got it. But now we have something worth fighting for. We are the 'bridge generation.' We must fight for our children.

"All we got out of the last war was an armistice—a temporary cessation of hostilities. We were unprepared for peace and we obtained neither peace, freedom or justice.

MUST HAVE PLAN

"We must have a plan after this war ends. If we are going to let this financial system dictate a peace all we are going to get is another armistice.

"I think in this by-election you have but one choice. All candidates are talking social security, but there is only one who can tell you how you can get it. He is John B. Gillies.

"If you feel this government is working on behalf of the people for social security, put '1' behind Mr. Gillies' name.

Big Flying Boat With 19 Aboard Lost on Flight

LONDON, Sept. 19.—(CP)—The flying boat Clare has been lost on a flight from West Africa to the United Kingdom with 13 passengers and a crew of six, it was reported officially last night.

The big airliner, belonging to the Royal Mail Company, was not lost due to enemy action, the announcement said. The cause of the mishap is under investigation.

McCoy Health Service

Impetigo is one of the common skin disorders of children, which may, however, affect adults. It is highly contagious and may be easily passed from one child to the next. Once it gets a start in a school, it may quickly spread and for this reason, an outbreak of one case in a school is followed by many others. It may also be transmitted from one member of the family to others in the same group. When a child develops the disease, the possibility of transmitting the skin inflammation to other children must be born in mind and the child should therefore be kept away from his playmates. It should also be remembered that impetigo is easily carried from one part of the body to another part and that in the affected individual there is therefore a danger of self-contagion. Impetigo usually yields to simple local treatment; however, if treatment is not given, the disease may, by spreading to different areas, persist for months at a time.

The disease is most likely to attack the skin of the face and hands and first appears as small blisters on the skin surface, which blisters are well separated. The healthy skin around the blisters shows little sign of inflamation. The blisters are small in size varying between the size of a pea to that of a fingernail, are not deep, are flat, and while in the beginning they are filled with a clear liquid, this soon becomes yellowish. Each blister becomes pustular, then dries up and is covered with a thin yellowish crust. One peculiarity of these crusts is their appearance of being "stuck to" the face. After the crust falls off a reddish spot is left on the skin. This stain fades out within a short time.

In some cases, the eruption consists of only a few separated blisters or vesicles, in other cases, parts of the face may be thickly covered by patches of the eruption, due to the fact that the lesions may form in clusters.

The patient should be instructed to keep the fingers away from the sores, or spots, as the inflamation may be carried from one place to another, following such contact Care should also be taken to avoid spreading the disease by rubbing a towel over one of the lesions and then using the towel on a healthy patch of skin. The best advice which can be given to cleanse the healthy portions first and the infected portions last. After touching the lesions, the hands should be thoroughly washed with plenty of hot soapy water.

When impetigo contagiosa occurs in men it commonly appears in the beard region and in such cases the infection may be spread by the use of the razor.

Impetigo is most likely to appear among the children of the poor and under-nourished, due to wrong food plays an important part in preparing the soil in which the infective organism can thrive.

As a general rule, impetigo does not last for more than two weeks, although, if the child is careless about touching the sores with the fingers, new ones may continue to break out. The cure is usually prompt.

Charters Are Granted Three Co-Operatives

Charters have been granted to three new co-operative organizations in the province, it was reported Friday by F. J. Fitzpatrick, supervisor of co-operative activities in Alberta.

The new groups are Battle River Feeders' Association, a livestock feeding and marketing body; Holyoke Seed Growers' Association; and Alberta Vegetable Growers' Association.

The last-named has offices at 421 Tegler building, Edmonton, and the secretary is A. T. Sinclair. The organization has for objectives the protection of seed potato and vegetable growers, vegetable crop improvement and the setting up of a provincial service and marketing organization for vegetable and seed growers of the province.

There were 180 active co-operatives in the province at the end of July, it was reported.

Utah is the Beehive state.

Women's Corps Hears Maj.-Gen. Jean Knox

Featured by short talks of encouragement to enlisted members at the Edmonton barracks here, and to new recruits to the C.W.A.C., Maj. Gen. Jean Knox, director-general of Britain's Territorial service, wound up a visit to Edmonton Friday.

Accompanied by Brig. F. M. W. Harvey, V.C., M.C., D.O.C., M.D. 13, and Lt.-Col. E. Brown, M.M., E.D., area commandant and other high officers, Maj. Gen. Knox inspected the Edmonton Coy. of the C.W.A.C. under the command of Lieut. Gerda Forsland at the Prince of Wales Armoury.

After the inspection Britain's highest ranking woman soldier spoke briefly to the women, and later addressed words of encouragement to a number of recruits who are as yet without uniform.

Later the party paid brief visits to the Aircraft Repair plant and to the United States Army commander here.

Vancouver Choir Coming Here Soon

The Elgar junior choir of Vancouver will appear in a recital at McDougall United church, Friday, Sept. 25, in aid of the Edmonton branch of the Red Cross. Robert Muir, secretary-manager, announced Saturday.

The choir is composed of 22 teen aged boys and girls. They are returning from their fourth Canadian tour which has been made to raise money for the Red Cross. The choir is paying its own travelling expenses, and all money earned is turned over to the Red Cross.

C. E. Findlater is director of the choir, and accompanist is Mrs. Beth Morrison. Mrs. Findlater accompanies them as chaperon.

The choir has won many competitions in Canada and England. Soloists include Elizabeth Hennings, violinist; Robert Bellamy and Yvonne Findlater, vocalists, and Rod Falconer, baritone soloist. Jessie Carmichael, vocalist, is also with them.

Announcement has been made of donations to the Northern Alberta Branch of the Navy League of Canada. The money will be spent for ditty-bags for sailors. Those making contributions are C.P.R. Ladies' Lawn Bowling Club, $24.00; Kiwanis Club, $300; Red Cross Superfluity Shop, $500.

The War Today

By JOHN COLLINGWOOD READE

'The Perfectionists' Allies' Danger

The other day we referred to the heartbreaking delays which are keeping powerful Anglo-American forces in Britain while their best opportunity to strike a really big blow at the enemy is gradually slipping by, and our Russian allies grow hourly more skeptical and disillusioned. "Some of this arises from the tendency of staff officers to develop formulas and axioms which must govern military organization, instead of considering objectively what needs to be done, then organizing the necessary force to do it."

Senator Truman, chairman of the United States Senate Special Defense Investigating Committee, has coined a useful word to describe this blight. He refers to "the perfectionists," and calls for a reorganization of the United States Army and Navy staffs to get action. The Senator was not talking about a second front, but about the provision of equipment.

There seems to be something faulty in the United States Army and Navy procurement policy. The investigating committee seems to think that certain types of aircraft are unsuitable for their job, and that credit-hungry nationalists are depriving the United States forces of useful tools while they wait for the perfect American machine to be designed.

CAN'T AFFORD TO WAIT

Senator Norris of Nebraska can see no reason why American fighter pilots and even British fighter pilots should not be supplied with Spitfires made in the United States. There is a serious danger that sectional prejudice will destroy the solidarity of the United Nations, and it is self-evident that we cannot afford to wait for ideal equipment.

The perfectionist in a military sense is a person to whom a fighting force is represented by a chart on a wall showing units authorized, equipment required, full establishment, holding units reinforcements and all the rest of it. Until the whole diagram is rounded out and filled in, he does not regard the army as capable of fighting.

A more realistic way to view the subject is to take an inventory of trained men and available equipment and adapt the structure of organization to suit the material on hand. If we cannot provide reinforcements for the units at present established, and the time for battle has come, we must have too many units, and the obvious course is to break up some of the units to provide reinforcements for others.

A hungry man whose wife is patiently accumulating a dinner set of sterling silver is not going to wait until the set is complete before eating his meal. If the food is there, and there are any plates and utensils, he will get on with the job.

IMPROVISED WEAPONS

Some of the best weapons in the war have been improvised on the field. The dynamite sticks of the Andalusian miners, the gasoline bottles used by the Finns as anti-tank weapons, the high-velocity anti-aircraft guns mounted for horizontal use as anti-tank guns, and the motley fleet which took the British army out of Dunkirk—these were devices improvised in desperate men with their backs to the wall.

A system is an aid to accomplishment. The moment it becomes an end in itself, or a master instead of a servant, those who serve it will be unable to bend it to the purposes it was designed to aid. The expert often fails where the amateur would have succeeded, because he has made a ritual of his trade, and the ritual has become sacrosanct. What is accomplished becomes less important than how it is done. Professional soldiers who get that way have outlived their usefulness.

Ever since the South African and Napoleonic wars have ceased to be issues decided by trials of strength between professional champions. The monopoly control of fighting forces by professional soldiers went out with dynastic wars. The wars that have been fought since the beginning of this century are peoples wars—wars in which the spade and the shovel, the crowbar, the dynamite stick and even the sporting rifle have been used by armed civilians as well as the most complex weapons, many of which have been developed and perfected since professional soldiers went to military college.

MONOPOLIES ALWAYS BAD

It is absurd, of course, to make comparisons between classes of men. A professional soldier is not necessarily stupid, nor does a successful career in civilian life necessarily fit a man for military leadership. But caste monopolies are always bad. Career soldiers who have won their promotions in drawing rooms and distinguished themselves at polo in the piping times of peace must yield place to keen and able civilian soldiers in the grim emergency of war.

Given equal ability, the professional soldier is a better man in command than a civilian soldier. But the "terror of the messes" in peacetime frequently turns out to be a gallant but stupid old buffer when confronted with an unfamiliar situation devised by an ingenious enemy. His training, then, defeats its purpose. It has taught him what should be done under certain circumstances and so disciplined his mind that whatever native wit he had has been stifled. Only in action are abilities and reputations exposed, and common observation should disclose the unsuitability of many men for positions of military command. It is much cheaper to remove them before battles are fought than afterward.

STALINGRAD HOLDS

The German air crowding in on Stalingrad, but as yet there is no sign that the fall of the city is imminent. Nor would it seem that the battered shell to which Stalingrad will be reduced before its defenders give in will be appraised as worth the cost of winning it. The fall of Stalingrad will symbolize Russia's loss rather than Germany's gain.

From a military point of view, the Germans will have won neither security nor respite. They will have extruded a salient which is still vulnerable to attack from the north and south, and while they will have cut a segment of the Russian army from its parent force they will not have deprived it of its sources of reinforcement and supply.

Before the Russians withdraw from Stalingrad, if ever they do, they will carry out a thorough job of demolition which should make it impossible for the city, if the Germans supplied with light and water or sewage-disposal facilities, to provide comfortable winter quarters for German troops is not the prime task of establishing a winter line. Troops do not fight from comfortable quarters. Th purpose of a winter line is to establish a chain of easily defended positions which will reduce the need for fighting to a minimum and provide respite for reorganization, repair and replacement of equipment.

NAZIS MUST HURRY

By the time they have finished bombing it to pieces, Stalingrad will not provide much of a bastion for the German winter line, and unless it is taken soon the Germans will not have enough strength to force the Russians out of the Don bend and protect the flanks of their narrow salient, which will have its apex at Stalingrad itself. And if their purpose in establishing a winter line is not to relieve their assault forces for operations elsewhere, Rommel is doomed and the German cause is lost.

Warfare cannot stand still. A conqueror in Hitler's position who is threatened from all sides must go on winning victories or resign himself to defeat. The accompanying map illustrates the approximate position of the fighting lines around Stalingrad, and also shows the vulnerability of the German salient to Russian counter-attacks.

Very few details have been released about the British raid on Tobruk. It seems to have been rather more than a commando raid for the purpose of destroying port facilities, but rather less than a determined attempt to land troops in Rommel's rear. Perhaps it was a sort of Egyptian Dieppe—a reconnaissance in force to test defences and prepare the way for large-scale attempts to land troops.

If so, it seems to have been costly out of all proportion to what was accomplished. Axis reports of British losses in warships may be exaggerated, but perhaps not much more so than the Axis reports of prisoners taken at Dieppe published at the time. Throwing men in frontal assaults against fortified ports supported by nothing but the guns of warships and the bombs of aircraft seems to be unwise. Infiltration along the coast after the Japanese manner or by parachute after the German manner may be a bit new-fangled, but it seems to work.

Large Canadian Area is Dimmed To Save Power

By the Canadian Press

The stars come back into their own in a large section of industrial Canada, Saturday evening, as man-made lights dim under the stress of war.

Under a federal order to conserve power supplies for vital war industries, advertising signs and lights in show windows will be extinguished. Street lighting will be curtailed and highway lights will go out.

COVERS WIDE AREA

The order affects all Ontario south of a line from Parry Sound to Huntsville to Pembroke, and in Quebec that area south of the 49th parallel and west of a point just east of Riviere Du Loup and including the island of Montreal.

All the advertising signs that have brightened the streets must go out, including those over theatres and those inside stores.

Munitions and supply officials in Ottawa could not say if the order affecting Ontario and Quebec was but the forerunner of similar orders elsewhere in Canada.

"It all depends on the power requirements of war industry," one spokesman said.

Besides the darkening of their streets, residents of the areas affected by the order must begin bringing down their household consumption of power. They are expected to give up the use of 100,000 horsepower and, to achieve this end, each housekeeper is being asked to voluntarily reduce his electric light bill by 20 per cent.

A training plane means an expenditure of about $25,000, a fighter costs approximately $50,000, and bombing planes from $100,000 to $300,000.

155 Are Slain By Nazis For Troop Attacks

LONDON, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The execution of 155 more persons by the Nazis, including 116 in Paris for attacks on German troops, was disclosed yesterday.

Those put to death in Paris were described as "Communist terrorists," a customary designation for persons who violate Nazi rules.

They were charged with attacks on German occupation troops and with being "in the pay of Britain." Gen. Otto von Stuelnagel, Nazi commander of the city, said the executions were "reprisals."

HOSTAGES SHOT

Twenty were hostages shot to death in the Croat village of Dugoselo in reprisal for the ambush slaying of two German soldiers, Yugoslav sources said.

The deaths of the other 19 were reported from Berne, Switzerland. Fourteen of them took place in Germany.

The Paris executions were announced in an amended version, issued by the Vichy news agency, of a German proclamation ordering all theatres, movies and other places of amusement in Paris closed Saturday and Sunday "because attempts against the German army have multiplied recently."

The proclamation said a number of German soldiers and French civilians were killed or wounded by "Communist terrorists" and also disclosed that large scale deportations had been carried out, without explaining the circumstances of these expatriations.

INCLUDED WOMAN

The 14 persons executed in Germany included one woman. All were accused of attempting to reorganize the Communist Party and listening to foreign broadcasts. They were put to death at Karlsruhe, Sept. 14.

Two men were executed for high treason Sept. 16 in Czecho-Slovakia; another man was executed Sept. 15 for having acted in favor of the enemy, while in eastern Croatia a man and wife were shot for having aided "Communist insurgents" to escape.

Labor Leader Is Re-Elected For New Term

By JACK WILLIAMS

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—(CP)—A. R. Mosher of Ottawa was unanimously re-elected president of the Canadian congress of labor last night at the annual convention of the congress.

In a contest for the position of first vice-president, A. A. McAuslane C.C.L. representative in Vancouver, polled 208 votes to the 194 votes of George Burt, United Automobile Workers' Canadian representative, Oshawa, Ont.

Sol Spivak, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Toronto, was elected 2nd vice-president, and Pat Conroy, Ottawa, was returned as secretary-treasurer.

NAME EXECUTIVE

The executive committee are: J. E. McGuire, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, Ottawa; C. H. Millard, United Steel Workers of America, Toronto; T. Pereira, National Union of Operating and Stationary Engineers, Montreal; Tom Johnson, United Automobile Workers, Windsor, Ont.; Silbey Barrett, United Mine Workers of America, Glace Bay.

At last night's session the convention passed a resolution recording that the convention "strongly disapproves of the actions of the minister of labor (Hon. Humphrey Mitchell) when dealing with the hours of work of employees of the shipyard industry at the west coast."

The resolution replaced one calling for Mr. Mitchell's resignation. The resolution committee recommended non-concurrence in the original resolution and it was referred back to the committee for further consideration.

In a lengthy resolution dealing with wartime labor problems the convention called for amendments to present orders-in-council to provide:

Adequate minimum wages for all workers with full collective bargaining freedom:

Expansion of investigating personnel of war labor boards to eliminate relays;

Public hearings by the boards.

SEEK SETTLEMENT

Efforts to reach a settlement by collective bargaining before application is made to the boards;

Full cost-of-living bonus for all workers;

The convention also endorsed a resolution calling for an appointment with government officials to seek immediate opening of negotiations for collective bargaining in two government-owned plants in Toronto—Victory Aircraft Enterprises Ltd., and Small Arms Ltd. The resolution also sought an immediate change in government policy on collective bargaining in government-owned plants.

A resolution empowering the executive to issue a call for stipulated emergency powers in labor disputes was defeated. President Mosher said he was opposed to allowing the Congress to pay for strikes until the delegates had first obtained the approval of the membership to go on strike.

REFER WORK PLAN

A resolution favoring continuous operation of war industries on a 168-hour week basis was referred to the incoming executive. The resolution was opposed by a large number of west coast shipyard delegates who objected to a government plan for a seven-day week under which the yards would be operated continuously but workers would only work six days in seven.

He is a son of Wade Werner, Associated Press correspondent who covered the outbreak of war in Europe.

SPEAK AT RALLY

C.C.F. Leaders Pledge All-Out Victory Drive On Home, Battle Fronts

Winning the war abroad and winning security through the mobilization of material as well as manpower and the development of Canada's natural resources at home, was the keynote of three addresses delivered by Co-operative Commonwealth Federation leaders at a mass meeting at the Empire Theatre Friday evening.

The meeting was held in support of Elmer E. Roper, C.C.F. candidate at next Tuesday's by-election. Approximately 400 attended.

Mr. Roper spoke first. He was followed by Angus MacInnis, C.C.F. member of parliament representing Vancouver East, and Harold Winch Jr., leader of the opposition in the B.C. legislature representing the same constituency in the provincial house as Mr. MacInnis represents in the Dominion house.

OUTLINES PLATFORM

Mr. Roper outlined briefly the C.C.F. platform contending that he is merely bringing before the public features of a program for which he has struggled for many years in his many capacities in the labor movement and in the province.

He stressed the need for urging upon the provincial government the speedy development of some of Alberta's natural resources as a vital step towards maximum war effort.

Both Mr. Winch and Mr. MacInnis brought out alleged weaknesses in the present prosecution of Canada's war effort and criticized the present monopolistic system as the root behind the folly.

William Miller was chairman of the meeting. H. D. Ainlay, city alderman, sponsored a drive for campaign funds that netted $139.50 and William Irvine, provincial organizer for the C.C.F. party, and Lyle Dickey, campaign chairman for Mr. Roper, spoke briefly on the progress of the campaign.

WORKS AT HOME

Fourteen workers, prominent in C.C.F. circles in the city, were seated on the platform for the first part of the meeting.

These were: Alderman H. D. Ainlay, Mary Crawford, provincial treasurer of the C.C.F.; Mrs. Flower, Mrs. McLeod, Mrs. Edith Rogers, Miss Isabel MacMillan, Joe Knight, Archie Richardson, Mrs. C. Lee, William Ireland, L. Foster, William Irvine and the three speakers.

Mr. McGinnis, in his opening remarks, read excerpts from a daily paper report of a Social Credit meeting to point out the contradictory statements made by a supporter of the Social Credit candidature.

Answering an editorial in the Edmonton Journal, Mr. MacInnis stated that the editorial was evidence in Alberta was in support of Mr. Roper who is bearing the C.C.F. banner. The C.C.F. is a Canadian movement, covering the width of the dominion and therefore, people from the provinces are vitally interested in the movement in other provinces, he said.

"It is not an election to entitle Mr. Roper to mix provinces," he added. "Another old party custom is that as a class fight in election time, then walk hand-in-hand after it is all over," he said.

Referring to the war, Mr. MacInnis stated that the failure of the leaders of the democratic world to realize the revolutionary character of this war is preventing the Allied Nations from fighting this war to the fullest effort.

MORE THAN WAR

"This is more than a war. It is a revolution. It is a struggle that will determine here who shall control the ways of life—the people or the vested interests." Mr. MacInnis declared.

"Today we have private monopoly, not private enterprise as many believe. There is no such thing left as private enterprise," he said.

"Private monopolies have no objections to the regimentation of masses of people. It is the big interests of Germany that financed Germany—yes, and more than just the big interests of Germany," he declared.

Mr. MacInnis then reviewed briefly the growth of the C.C.F. in Canada, stating that it is something that grew out of economic conditions, step by step.

He stated that the policies of the C.C.F. are identical with the policies of the labor parties of Britain ,New Zealand and Australia.

In closing Mr. MacInnis stated, "War is important to us because we view an opportunity to go forward and build that new world of free people—when men can be men and women can be women; and where all can be free."

SCORES EDITORIAL

Strongly criticizing an editorial that appeared in a daily paper Thursday, Mr. Winch stated that such editorials express the reason for this war.

"It is narrow Canadianism as exemplified through this article that is the cause of the world crisis that we are in today," he declared. "That is the reason for the hatred in a community, in a province, in a continent. That is the reason of hatred, man against man."

"We must get away from such narrow parochialism. It is on account of such attitude that we have not yet been able to establish a national feeling in this country.

"Your problems are mine and mine are yours. Your failures are mine and mine are your. Your successes are mine and mine are yours. The same that is true for the man is true for the province and the nations.

"We are fighting a war today to give us an opportunity to solve our own problems in our own way. That is why you are having a by-election campaign. You are being given a chance to say what you want. You will be saying next Tuesday how you want this war fought and how you want to live after it is over," he stated.

In speaking of Canada's war effort Mr. Winch stated that the national effort is being retarded because private interests will not develop provincial potentialities and provincial and national governments are failing to take action because they are apparently more interested in protecting private monopoly and the interests of capitalism than they are in forwarding the war effort.

DEVELOP RESOURCES

Resources so urgently needed for war purposes must be developed either by provincial or national governments before utmost efficiency can be attained, Mr. Winch stressed.

"The efficiency and loyalty of the enemy to its leaders can only be combated by complete mobilization of our resources," he declared. "It is said that a great deal has been done in Canada, but that is not enough.

"The war must be won," he stated, "because on a successful military victory depends our right to be in a position to solve our own problems in our own way. Military victory entails total war which requires maximum efficiency and production, and the development of high morale. We have not these requirements today because governments and those in control of our war policy have negated the very principles of democracy for which we are fighting by restrictive orders-in-council which are inimical to the standards and rights of labor.

"It is not here as a 'foreigner' as intimated by one of your papers. I am here as a Canadian, as a worker in the Dominion of Canada. During the depression years, experience taught me to hate Canada. I hated the Canadian government. I hated the parliament system. I felt I wasn't wanted by Canada.

"I am here today as a Canadian determined to struggle on to make this Canada of ours a place where there can never be a repetition of those dark days; a place for free people not for profiteers.

"I am here to do my part towards the eradication of an economic system of capitalism at home which leads to prison in times of peace and death in times of war," Mr. Winch stated in conclusion.

OPPONENTS HELP

Mr. Roper pointed out that he had received some unexpected free advertising from one or two opposing candidates who have talked C.C.F. at the meetings they have held.

He stated that the C.C.F. platform has been mentioned at least twenty two or three paragraphs in newspaper reports of meetings of other candidates. In one instance the word C.C.F. was used 14 times within three-quarters of a column, he said.

This is a good sign. It shows that the C.C.F. is capturing the imagination of the people, and there is a good reason for it, he added.

More and more Canadians are determined that there will not be a repetition of the episodes of the last post-war period; with young men in box-cars, relief rolls, meal tickets, and flop houses, he said.

At that time the C.C.F. was the only party in Canada demanding that a work and wages program be instituted; that the 200,000 young men be put to work.

MOTION DEFEATED

This motion, presented by a C.C.F. member, was defeated because the minister claimed that it would cost $300,000 a year, Mr. Roper claimed.

Do we not experience today exactly what the C.C.F. asked for years ago. Men are at work and it is costing, not $300,000 a year but $300,000 every three days; and is anyone suffering from that expenditure? he queried.

"It goes to prove again that the money can be found if the government feels that it should be found.

Ice-Capades Bond Sales $1,000,000

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Purchasers of War Bonds totaling more than $1,000,000 attended a performance of Ice-Capades of 1943 at Madison Square Garden as guests of the Garden and sponsors of the extravaganza.

The idea is resulted and the dispatch with which the tickets allotted for this purpose were disposed of gave further evidence of the hold ice skating revues have on the public.

Former Chairman Of Liquor Board Dies in Manitoba

WINNIPEG, Sept. 19. — (CP). — William P. Dutton, 71, former chairman of the Manitoba liquor control commission, died at his home here last night.

For many years, Mr. Dutton was prominent in the western lumber trade as managing director of the Red Deer Lumber Company, and president of the Elk Lumber Manufacturing Company of Fernie, B.C., and the Great West Lumber Company, Winnipeg.

He is survived by his widow, two daughters and three sons, including F.O. E. F. Dutton, former Winnipeg newspaperman now overseas with the R.C.A.F.

would get the money to start a revolving fund for the building if a definite number of medium priced houses each year to be rented at reasonable rates and sold on easy terms with low interest rates. I maintain that if such a plan had been put into effect several years ago it would not have been necessary for the city medical health officer to report on the serious slum conditions in this city now.

"The present government has found no difficulty in finding well over a million dollars to meet the losses in the operation of the Treasury Branches. It could therefore find a million dollars to start a housing fund. This could be added to by a definite amount from general revenue each year and all the returns from rentals or sales of houses would come back into the fund and eventually it became self-supporting," he said.

ISSUE CONCERNS ALL

In reference to the war effort, Mr. Roper stated that this is not an issue that only concerns those at Ottawa, but an issue that concerns all.

He emphasized that if elected, he will demand that the provincial government take the proper steps to make available as soon as possible for war effort all the resources of this province.

In his plea for social legislation Mr. Roper declared that there is nothing more greatly needed than the extension of the province's health services to provide free medical hospitalization and maternity aid.

"Similarly, the C.C.F. platform for which I stand advocates free text books and other public school pupils and that the books and supplies are to be bought and financed in a like manner in which the schools are financed," Mr. Roper declared.

The provincial government should assume greater responsibility to distribute the burden of financing education more equitably, Mr. Roper stated.

He emphasized that proper legislation should be instituted whereby increased money could be made available to the extent of the child's education.

"We also seek increase in the amount paid to widowed mothers under the Mothers' Allowance Act; the reduction of the age to which the old age pension shall be granted, and an increase in the pension," he stated.

TEST OF SINCERITY

Mr. Roper argued that the test of the sincerity of candidate's promises should lie in determining whether the items the candidate is holding forth in election time have been the constant concern of the candidate.

"The things we are advocating now we have been advocating in season and out of season, week after week and year after year. They make up the C.C.F. policy," he declared.

In conclusion, Mr. Roper said:

"There are two government and two opposition members already representing the city of Edmonton. We believe that it would be only fair and democratic for the C.C.F. to be given the other seat.

"The greatest danger to democracy is indifference on the part of the people. It was never more important that we should show our appreciation of democratic rights than now. I strongly urge every citizen to exercise his or her franchise on Tuesday."

U.S. Army Forges Vital United Nations Link on Canadian Highway to Alaska
New Lifeline to North Slashed Through Bushland, Across Muskeg and Rivers

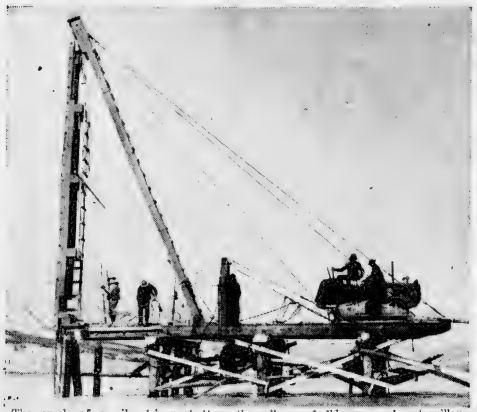

A welcome army of invasion is the great force of United States soldiers now cutting the wonderful Alcan Highway through Canada's wilderness to Alaska. A former lithographer, Sherman Gardner of Midvale, Utah, is working as surveyor.

The Trail of '42. Through bushland, across muskeg and rivers, a vital artery in North America's network of defence is feeding weapons and supplies to the north.

Mastermind of the Alcan is Brigadier General W. H. Hoge, officer commanding the U.S. forces building the road. The project is one of a broad program of joint U.S.-Canadian military activities, including training of troops and defence.

The crash of a pile driver shatters the silence, bulldozers and caterpillar tractors roar as they carve out a lifeline to our northern bastion. Engineers are shown pounding bridge supports into the riverbed, completing another link.

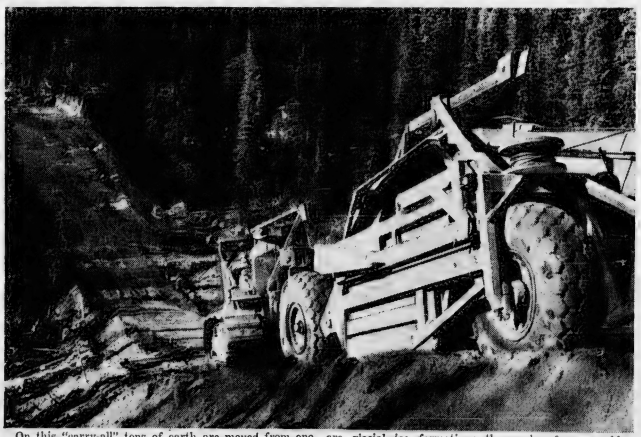

Payment of U.S. troops and Canadian contractors brings in American exchange, facilitating purchase of war materials in United States for Dominion's arsenals.

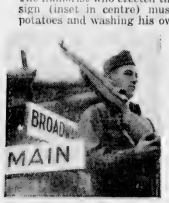

"You should hear these fellows singing at their work", says Nicholas Morant, who made these photos. Pte. Walter Donald of Quitman, Miss., is applying soap to Pte. Joseph Lawrence of Augusta, Ga., at an advance road camp barber shop.

On this "carry-all" tons of earth are moved from one section of the road to a fill. Hidden two or three feet under the muskeg in some sections along the road are glacial ice formations thousands of years old. When muskeg is removed the ice melts, creating heavy morass. U.S. Army engineers have solved the problem.

First Class Private Dick Lewis of Oskaloosa, Iowa, shares his ration in his messkit with a husky puppy. He'd heard huskies were vicious, found them friendly.

Pte. Lewis has no confidence in his ability to thumb a ride to Texas, but someone might be driving as far as the postoffice. He enjoys getting mail from home.

SPORTING BLOOD

CHAPTER XI

HUNTER stared at Bella Ballard. She knew who got the $17,000, and knew who had it now! And it wasn't Red—or Strickland Ballard, which Hunter would have accepted as the same thing—who signed his bond so he could be released, but Temple, president of the First National. So many questions popped up in Hunter's mind that he could only gulp and stammer.

"You know who did get that money? I mean—"

"I took it out."

"Great guns!" Hunter Dent groaned. "What is this, anyway? You mean you were the one that opened the new safe, when I am the only one who knows the combination, and removed that money? Red, was that you? How in the nation did you get the combination?"

"Hunter Dent, do you mean to sit here and pretend that you don't know I'm even alive? For years and years I have trotted after you like a puppy. I used to as a little girl let you put me on your horse, and you were almost a father to me. I've been so much underfoot that now I'm a young lady I have grown ashamed and tried to stay away from you, though not very successfully.

"So, one day when you were trying to open the safe and couldn't remember the combination, and took out your wallet and read it, and got down on your knees and said the combination aloud while you worked it, I was there in the door watching. You were so absorbed you didn't even notice me.

"So I remembered your old combination just to soul-smart you some time. Maybe I had in mind laying a bet and taking your last dollar. I don't remember. But when Junior came in that night after he had got mixed in the hold-up—you see, Hunter, all that was doped up while I was out for a ride with Oliver, and so I didn't know anything about it until too late; well, I followed those blood stains, I went up to your office, because Junior would make right straight for you if he got into trouble. I opened the safe, and there was the bag of money. With my own little hands I removed it. I'd got wind enough of what was going on to know the money had to be restored.

"I told you I know who has it now. Would you like to know?"

"Who?" Hunter asked.

"The First National Bank. I took it there myself and turned it over to Mr. Temple. I asked him to see father, and the two of them worked out some way of going on your bond and letting you out. I couldn't tell them much. I couldn't say to Dad that Junior was the hold-up man. I just turned the money back to the bank and told them to keep their mouths shut until we could see a little further."

Hunter could only repeat, "So you did that."

"Yes, and I asked a man to marry me and he turned me down cold."

"What are you talking about?"

"I'm talking about coming to see you in jail and making a wager with you that you'd soon be free, and you would propose to me and I'd say yes, and we'd get married. I even laid my bet on the barrel-head and you wouldn't put up. You just sat there dumb. Well, if you don't want to marry me you don't have to." She assumed a lofty manner.

"Red, you're plain crazy! You and Tisdale are engaged to be married. He's rich. He's in on the Ballard fortune. What's more logical than you two should marry and keep the fortune intact? What am I? A kind of glorified hired man for your dad. Why, even the colts I raise go to him. The strain of prolific corn I develop becomes his. What chance do I have?"

She turned to examine him. Her eyes traced his features, dropped to take in his big athletic shoulders and chest. "You're young though. You seem healthy. You appear to have your original equipment of teeth, hair and brains. I always admired your intelligence, Hunter."

"Thanks," he said with dry bitterness.

"Did it ever occur to you that I might be a good sport after all, Hunter? I mean your being poor has never worried me. I read stories and see motion pictures where the poor boy refuses to marry the wealthy girl because it will give him an inferiority complex; but I thought you might be above such petty things, Hunter. You've made yourself — gone through the university mostly on your own, become a scientific research man, you've created things, such as that strain of corn. And you've only begun. Your whole life lies ahead of you. There is nothing to keep you from making a name for yourself that will be the envy of many men who only had wealth to start on — Old Tisdale, for instance. I wouldn't be afraid to start from scratch with such a man as you, Hunter. I'm betting on you. You remind me in lot of ways of Dad. He met a challenge. They made him mad and he showed them. Well, now I've told you. I thought perhaps you loved me, Hunter."

"God," he said, "I do love you!"

"I wouldn't have you now on a silver platter."

"Red, you drive me almost to murder!"

"We still have one of those messy things to clear up."

"So we have," Hunter said. "So we have. Look here, Red. Let me tell you how I have this doped up." He knit his brows, groping for words. "Let's start from the beginning. At one of the parties at your house Hank Temple let it drop that he had to get to the bank to see a shipment of money get out. Seventeen thousand dollars. It would have to be a private matter, Maybe only Hankins and his father, and the parties who were to get the money, know about the business. Hank didn't mean, perhaps, to let it slip. But it was between friends. All right. The gang is there, hears; and Hank has to go. They make their wagers. Suppose, just as a hypothesis, the Ghibarto twins make a wager no one there could intercept the messenger and take that roll off him. Or it could have been any one else present who bet. Junior, with a little too much under his belt as usual, took the bet up. The party broke. Hankins Temple dispatched the money by the messenger. The time was not far from midnight. Why the money had to move at such a late hour, and in such a way, is not easy to explain unless you consider another thing or two.

"Okay, let's consider them. There is that ordnance plant scandal which has just broken. The older Ghibarto is involved in fraud against the government. Rascal. And a man who in wartime pulls something like that is a rascal. Like father like twins. The money is a bribe. Know about that wharf project which is just across the river from the old landing below Water Street? That is a part of this ordnance plant. Some one down there in the know was getting ready to talk. Ghibarto—and this is hard talk; but we have to look things in the eye — and perhaps banker Temple, and just possibly your dad, who usually has irons in all the civic fires, fingers in all the local pies, though I take it for granted neither man knowingly got caught with his pants down—had to get a bribe there to shut a mouth. Since it was secret it looked safe enough. The murdered messenger left the bank. He had to go on foot, part of the way in any case, because the street was closed down which he must hurry.

"He goes along. Junior drives into town with the gang and strikes out after him, and yells 'Stick-em-up' in his best style. Up to now it is all just a good joke. Good sports standing on their sportsmanship.

"But the Ghibarto twins, rascals like their daddy, see a chance to pick up $17,000. Looks like a sure-fire setup. The gang don't dare talk. Kill the messenger and he can't talk. Might as well shoot Junior, too. Two men, nondescript and dark, did appear, and the fireworks started. Well, those were the twins. Why they didn't leave town when the plan flopped—they didn't figure on Junior really shooting back to keep the joke from spreading, and toting his hot lead like a true sport—is explainable when you figure that Junior won't talk; he may yet die without talking. Besides, the guy that runs looks guilty. So—

Red, her face strange, let in the clutch and started off with a scruff of rubber. Her jaw was suddenly grim and set.

Ives, senior judge of the Alberta supreme court, trial division, will be appointed to the chief Justiceship, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Chief Justice C. R. Mitchell. It is also understood that H. H. Parlee, K.C., of Edmonton, will receive appointment to the vacant seat on the bench.

Edmonton has been asked to submit a name for a Canadian naval vessel now under construction. But the name cannot be "Edmonton." It appears there already is a ship in the Canadian navy called "Edmundston," named after a town in New Brunswick. Ottawa officials feel that if another ship were named "Edmonton" too much confusion would result. City council, however, feels that Edmonton should be the name of the new vessel, so they are writing Ottawa hoping to have the name of the ship called "Edmundston" changed.

City council has passed on to Chief of Police Matt. Blackwood the application from 10 junior constables for restoration of the former wage scale of $125 monthly. The chief has been asked for a report and recommendation on the question.

France or Germany and served to some extent in auxiliaries of the armed forces. But in Canada and the United States very few women left their homes to perform services that formerly was done by the men.

This time the picture is completely changed and far greater changes are to come. No nation on earth can employ women in factories and other vital capacities to the extent possible in Canada and the United States.

And the reason is one not generally noted in the press and other publications. In Canada and the United States have more heavy labor-saving devices in operation than any other nation. No longer does man eat his bread by the sweat of his brow on this continent, in a general sense.

The laborer has disappeared from the factory, to be replaced by the operator. We have evolved machines and are just about all the heavy work. So women, after a period of training, are about the equal of men in some capacities superior, to the men they replace.

In our struggle against the Axis this is a very fortunate state of affairs, but what about the post-war period? Women will return to the home and go about the job of raising a family as of yore, you say? Perhaps; but don't bet too much on it.

And don't forget, a precedent will have been established that may well be taken advantage of by employers of "labor." It will be an established fact that women can compete on an equal basis with men for most jobs. And when re-employment of the millions of service men after the war is being considered, the fact that there are millions of women capable of doing the same work will have to be also taken under consideration.

Probe is Opened on Rents Paid by 'Boomtown' Airmen

REGINA, Sept. 19.—(CP)—Investigation and hearing of rents paid by air force men living outside barracks at the Dominion No. 4 bombing and gunnery school, has commenced under direction of Judge Hanbidge, Wynyard district magistrate, and Eric R. Gold, rentals supervisor for the prairie provinces, for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

The inquiry came as the result of complaints having been made about the rents charged in a place called "Boomtown", just outside the airport, which has sprung up since construction of the school and is unashamed from a strip of park country into a small town of close to 150 homes.

Red Cross Superfluity Shop Celebrates Second Birthday

The second birthday of the Red Cross Superfluity Shop will be observed Monday, Sept. 21, and earnings since its inauguration total $8700, it was announced Saturday.

All stock is donated, and workers are making a plea for birthday gifts to replenish the supply. One hundred per cent of the earnings are turned over to the Red Cross due to the fact that C. R. Frost has given the shop space free of charge. All workers are voluntary.

The shop offers an opportunity for all to use their talents by cooking, making articles for the home, jellies, knitted baby clothes, dolls or stuffed toys for the Christmas sale. Mrs. W. J. Dick is in charge of this branch.
